This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.

+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.

+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.

+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. MESSAGE

FROM THE

PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES,

TRANSMITTING,

In response to Senate resolution of February 9, 1886, statements relative to payments of awards under certain treaties with France and Spain.

FEBRUARY 17, 1886.—Read and referred to the Committee on Printing, and the message and letter of the Secretary of State ordered to be printed.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, Washington, February 16, 1886.

To the Senate of the United States:

I transmit herewith, in response to a resolution of the Senate of the 9th instant, a statement showing the payments of awards of the Commissioners appointed under the Conventions between the United States and France, concluded April 30, 1803, and July 4, 1831, and between the United States and Spain, concluded February 22, 1819, prepared from the books in the Department of the Treasury under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, at the request of the Secretary of State. Also, for the further information of the Senate, a report prepared by direction of the Secretary of State from the original records in his custody of the awards made by the said Commissioners in claims allowed by them.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, Washington, February 16, 1886.

To the President:

The Secretary of State, in compliance with a resolution of the Senate of February 9, has the honor to transmit for communication to the Senate a detailed statement, prepared by direction of the Secretary of the Treasury from the books in his Department, relative to the payments of awards made by the Commissions established under provisions of the Conventions concluded between the United States and France April 30, 1803, and July 4, 1831, and under the Treaty with Spain of February 22, 1819.

For the further information of the Senate, it appears to me proper to join with that statement an abstract which I have caused to be compiled from the records of the same Commissions, containing the names of the persons and of the vessels concerned in those cases allowed as valid by the respective Commissions, as well as such other data as have seemed to be important relative to the amounts awarded and to the payments of the same.

Respectfully submitted.

T. F. BAYARD.

LIST OF THE PAPERS TRANSMITTED HEREWITH.

(1) Letter from the Secretary of the Treasury to the Secretary of State, January 20, 1886, transmitting—

(2) A detailed statement from the books of the Treasury Department relative to the payment of awards of the Commissioners appointed under the Conventions concluded between the United States and France April 30, 1803, and July 4, 1831, and the Treaty with Spain February 22, 1819.

(3) Letter from the Secretary of the Treasury to the Secretary of State, transmitting a statement of the Register of the Treasury as to the history of the payments of French spoliation claims, dated January 9, 1886.

(4) Convention with France of April 30, 1803.

(5) Statement concerning the Board of Commissioners established under that Treaty.

(6) List of the names of persons and vessels concerned in the cases admitted by that Board. (From records in the Department of State.)

(7) Four tables, reprinted from an unofficial publication entitled "To the people of the United States," Philadelphia, 1807—by "A member of the late Board"—being:

I. List of claims found upon the conjectural note and admitted by the American Board, including a list of vessels embargoed at Bordeaux.

II. List of claims not found upon the conjectural note and admitted by the American Board.

III. List of claims found upon the conjectural note and rejected by the American Board.

IV. List of claims not found upon the conjectural note and rejected by the American Board.

(8) Convention with France of July 4, 1831.

(9) List of the awards made by the Commissioners appointed under that treaty. (From records in the Department of State.)

(10) Articles IX, X, and XI, of Treaty with Spain of February 22, 1819.

(11) Alphabetical list of vessels and contracts upon which allowances were made by the Commissioners appointed under Article XI of that Treaty. (From records in the Department of State.)

(12) A list of the amounts allowed and distributed by the above-mentioned Commissioners. (From records in the Department of State.)

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, January 20th, 1886.

SIR: In compliance with the request contained in your communication of September 10, 1885, I have the honor to forward herewith a detailed statement from the books of this Department, relative to the payments of awards of the Commissioners established under treaties between the United States and France of April 30, 1803, and July 4, 1831, and Spain of February 22, 1819.

Respectfully yours,

D. MANNING,
Secretary.

The SECRETARY OF STATE.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, REGISTER'S OFFICE, December, 1885.

The following statements of payments made on account of French spoliations, under convention with France of April 30, 1803, are from the official records of this office.

W. S. ROSECRANS,
Register.

TREATIES WITH FRANCE AND SPAIN.

TREATY OF 1803 WITH FRANCE.

The treaty of April 30, 1803, provides that certain debts due by France to citizens of the United States, contracted before September 30, 1800, should be paid, with interest at 6 per cent.; but the principal and interest were not to exceed twenty millions of francs.

A commission was to be appointed with authority to examine the documents filed in the bureaux of the French departments, to decide whether the claims presented were included in the classes provided for by the convention and were in accordance with the principles established therein. A method was also provided for reaching a decision in doubtful or disputed cases. The principal and interest of the debts decided to be covered by the treaty were to be discharged by orders (or bills) drawn by the American minister to France on the United States Treasury. The payments were to be accepted as an offset to claims of France upon the United States for the purchase of Louisiana, which was purchased by this Government on the same date, viz, April 30, 1803.

The accompanying report shows the numbers, dates, and amounts of the bills drawn by Hon. John Armstrong, minister to France, and to whom they were payable. It also shows the numbers of the reports of the First Auditor of the Treasury upon which the bills were paid, and the numbers, dates, and amounts of the warrants issued by the Secretary authorizing their payment, together with the names of the persons to whom the latter were payable. In a great majority of cases the warrants were paid to attorneys or agents.

In a second convention with France, concluded on the same day, it was agreed that the dollar of the United States should be fixed at 5.3333 francs. The total amount of payments under this treaty on account of awards was $3,738,268.98.

TREATY OF 1819 WITH SPAIN.

The treaty of February 22, 1819, with Spain contains the cession of the Floridas to the United States. By Article IX of the treaty each nation renounced all claims for damages or injuries which they themselves, as well as their respective citizens and subjects, may have suffered prior to the time of the signing of the treaty as enumerated in five classes for each nation. In particular, the renunciation of the United States extended "to all claims on account of prizes made by French privateers and condemned by French consuls within the territory and jurisdiction of Spain," for which injuries the United States certified that they had not received any compensation from France. By Article XI the United States undertook to make satisfaction of the claims of her citizens thus renounced to an amount not exceeding five millions of dollars. The treaty provided for the appointment of three commissioners (citizens of the United States), who were to meet at Washington and decide upon the amount and validity of all the claims included in the before-mentioned descriptions.

The money to pay the awards of the commissioners was provided by the sale of $5,000,000 of 4½ per cent. bonds, authorized by the act of May 24, 1824.

The accompanying record of the payment of these awards contains the same facts in regard to the Auditor's reports, and the warrants issued thereon, as were given concerning the treaty of 1803.

The total amount paid on awards under this treaty was $4,997,572.69.

TREATY OF 1831 WITH FRANCE.

The treaty with France concluded at Paris, July 4, 1831, in the first article, states that—

> The French Government, in order to liberate itself completely from all the reclamations preferred against it by citizens of the United States for unlawful seizures, captures, sequestrations, confiscations, or destructions of their vessels, cargoes, or other property, engages to pay a sum of twenty-five millions of francs to the Government of the United States, who shall distribute it among those entitled, in the manner and according to the rules which it shall determine.

Payment was to be made in six annual installments, with interest at 4 per cent. from the day of the exchange of the ratification, viz, from February 2, 1832. From the total amount the Government of France was authorized to retain one and a half million francs on account of debts due by the United States to the royal treasury of France or to the citizens of that country, which amount (principal and interest) was made good to the claimants by the United States, under the act of July 13, 1832. Commissioners were appointed, who made awards amounting to $9,362,193.47. The amount at first reported was $9,352,193.47, to which $10,000 was added by act of March 3, 1837, to correct a clerical error.

To represent these awards a series of certificates was issued from the office of the Register of the Treasury. The certificates were issued in sets of three, each set bearing a common number and being identical in the text, except that the title of the first certificate shows that it was issued on account of the first, second, third, and fourth installments, the title of the second certificate of the set shows it to be for the fifth installment, and the title of the third certificate that it is for the sixth installment.

One certificate was sometimes issued for a single award; in other cases many awards were consolidated into one certificate; or, again, one award was divided among several certificates. In other cases two or more awards were united, and the sum divided among two or more certificates, without any discoverable reference to the amount of the awards composing them.

Certificates were often issued to attorneys, to assignees, or other parties than those to whom the awards were made.

A large number of awards was made to Charles Bradbury, as agent for about forty parties. Certificates were issued in the name of Mr. Bradbury for the full amount of the awards, viz, certificates Nos. 916 to 928 and 955 to 970. There is, however, no sufficient evidence to show which awards were consolidated to form each particular certificate, a matter which lay wholly within the discretion of Mr. Bradbury. The reference on the index is from the name of each of the claimants in question to this whole series of certificates.

The work of prosecuting these claims was very largely conducted through agents who in some cases received compensation in money, but far more frequently received a share of the award, the percentage of the commission being agreed upon between the claimant and the agent. In all cases included in the latter class the amount of the certificate for the claimants was ascertained by deducting the agent's commission from the amount of the award.

Separate certificates were issued to agents for the portion of the award assigned them. Generally the commission in connection with several certificates was consolidated into one certificate. Jeremiah Nelson consolidated his commissions in connection with 126 different certificates into seven certificates, Nos. 1051 to 1054 and 1069 to 1071. The reference has in each case been from each of the 126 certificates to the whole series of seven, as the division into seven certificates seem to have been made without reference to the separate items of commission from which they are made up. The accompanying report on the treaty of 1831 is divided into two parts. The first part is intended to identify the certificates with the corresponding awards, as shown by names, memorial numbers, and amounts, and by the records of this office. Each award is described by its memorial number, amount, and the name of the vessel in connection with which it was made. Opposite each award or series of awards is placed the certificate or certificates issued thereupon. The certificate issued to the claimant is described by number, amount, and the name in which issued, and where the award was to a different person from that mentioned in the certificate the fact is noted underneath. In the two columns between the certificates and awards is placed a statement of the amount of the award assigned to the agent as his commission, and the number of the certificate in which this amount is taken up and issued to him.

Payments were made upon the certificates from time to time as the money was received, including two dividends upon the certificate representing the first, second, third, and fourth installments, one of 20 per cent. and one of 19.97 per cent; two payments were made upon the certificate for the fifth installment, viz, for 5 per cent. and for 3.9578; a payment of 8.8248 per cent. was made upon the certificate for the sixth installment, and a final payment of 2.2145 per cent. was made, called "arrears of interest upon the first, second, third, and fourth installments;" total, 59.3671 per cent.

The dates and amounts of these payments are shown in detail in the second part of the report. The payments were mainly made through George Newbold, the president of the Bank of America, New York. The amounts given in the columns are those allowed by the accounting officers of the Treasury Department. Differences in the amounts actually paid are shown by foot-notes.

Where the first and second payments were made at the same time they were united and paid in one amount, which appears in the column of the second payment. Under like circumstances the third and fourth payments are united, and the sum is placed in the column of the fourth payment.

The record of payments has been prepared mainly from the original receipts for the money indorsed upon the certificates. The remaining amounts have been taken from the reports of the amounts allowed as paid by the accounting officers of the Department.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, REGISTER'S OFFICE,
January 2, 1886.

SIR: In response to the letter of the Hon. T. F. Bayard, Secretary of State, dated September 10, 1885, I have the honor to transmit a detailed history of the payments on account of French spoliations, under convention with France of April 30, 1803, and July 4, 1831, and with Spain, February 22, 1819, as shown by the official records of this office.

Respectfully,

W. S. ROSECRANS, Register.

Hon. DANIEL MANNING,
Secretary of the Treasury.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, REGISTER'S OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., January 9, 1886.

Hon. THOMAS F. BAYARD,
Secretary of State:

SIR: In connection with the report recently prepared for the Secretary of State concerning payments under the convention of July 4, 1831, with France, for spoliations upon citizens of the United States, I desire to make the following additional explanations and statements:

First. The amount reported as paid under the sixth instalment, on certificate No. 1290, is not the exact sum which would have been due John Fairfield for this installment; but it is a balance of account, as decided upon the principles recommended by the First Comptroller, and involving the question of the liability of Mr. Fairfield as surety upon the custom-house bond of James A. G. Otis. See Fifth Auditor's report No. 9534, and accompanying papers.

Second. I send herewith two statements, marked Schedule A and B. Schedule B is a copy of a statement approved by the First Comptroller, who thereby directed the cancellation of certain specified certificates for the sixth installment, which had been issued to individuals who were debtors to the United States, as principals or sureties upon custom-house bonds. In place of these it directs the issue of other certificates of the same installment and of equal amount, in the name of various collectors of customs, who were to receive the payments and apply them on the before-mentioned bonds, and it also directs the issue of a certificate to Mr. George Law, who was the agent of the Government in recovering these sums, and whose pay consisted in a percentage of the certificates which were applied in this manner.

It appears from statements upon the faces of certificates Nos. 1491, 1492, and 1493 of the fifth installment, and from other sources, that they were issued in like manner with the issues in Schedule B, in place of canceled certificates of the same installment owned by the before-mentioned debtors and others to the United States.

It also appears that a statement of these cancellations and issues on the fifth installment, similar in character to Schedule B, was prepared and filed in this office. In the lapse of nearly half a century this paper has been mislaid, and up to the present time has not been found.

It is believed, however, that conclusive evidence has been gathered from other sources of information in the Department that the certificates enumerated in Schedule A are the certificates in place of which Nos. 1491, 1492, and 1493 were issued.

The canceled certificates and the three last mentioned are on file, and it can be shown that the owners of all the canceled certificates were debtors to the Government on unpaid custom-house bonds.

From a report of Hon. Levi Woodbury, Secretary of the Treasury, made in compliance with a resolution of the House of Representatives (Ex. Doc. No. 183, Twenty-sixth Congress, first session), it appears that the total amount received under this treaty, and which was divisible among claimants to whom awards had been made, was $5,558,108.07. This sum was estimated to be equivalent to a dividend of 59.3671 per cent. upon the total amount of the awards, viz, $9,362,193.27.

Total amount of payments as shown by warrants		$5,553,162 13
Amount carried to the surplus fund		4,945 94
Total		5,558,108 07

The payments, as shown by the report for the State Department, are as follows:

Payments on first, second, third, and fourth installments	$1,684,008 82 2,001,651 89	3,685,660 71
Payments on fifth installment	381,979 64 456,574 98	838,554 62
Payments on sixth installment		826,545 07
Payments on arrears of interest		202,149 17
		5,552,909 57

In addition to the foregoing amounts I find records of payments, apparently erroneous, as follows:

FIFTH INSTALLMENT.

A payment upon certificate No. 1451 (see report No. 5085. This appears to be a double payment, as the same certificate had been paid in report No. 4326)	$63 25

ARREARS OF INTEREST.

A payment upon certificate No. 1285 (report No. 5092), which had already been paid under report No. 4935	14 15
A payment upon certificate No. 104 (report No. 6602), which had already been paid under report No. 5115	154 35
A payment upon certificate No. 116 (report No. 6602), which had already been paid under report No. 5115	21 10
Total duplicate payments	252 85

Errors were also discovered in the footing of various statements of the Fifth Auditor, amounting to the sum of 29 cents.

The statement by warrants, with the above corrections, will agree with the report for the State Department, which will appear as follows:

Amount paid as reported by warrants		$5,553,162 13
Add for short footings		29
		5,553,162 42
Deduct for duplicate payments		252 85
Amount as per report		5,552,909 57

Respectfully,

W. S. ROSECRANS, Register.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, FIRST COMPTROLLER'S OFFICE, June 4, 1839.

SIR: Be pleased to cancel certificates for sixth installment of French indemnity and issue others in lieu thereof, according to statement within.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. N. BARKER, Comptroller.

THOMAS L. SMITH, Esq.,
Register of the Treasury.

No. 1512 to 1518 for the sixth installment only.

CONVENTION BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA AND THE FRENCH REPUBLIC, CONCLUDED APRIL 30, 1803.

The President of the United States of America and the First Consul of the French Republic, in the name of the French people, having by a treaty of this date terminated all difficulties relative to Louisiana, and established on a solid foundation the friendship which unites the two nations, and being desirous, in compliance with the second and fifth articles of the convention of the eighth Vendémiaire, ninth year of the French Republic, (30th September, 1800,) to secure the payment of the sums due by France to the citizens of the United States, have respectively nominated as Plenipotentiaries, that is to say: the President of the United States of America, by and with the advice and consent of their Senate, Robert R. Livingston, Minister Plenipotentiary, and James Monroe, Minister Plenipotentiary and Envoy Extraordinary of the said States, near the Government of the French Republic; and the First Consul, in the name of the French people, the citizen Francis Barbé Marbois, Minister of the Public Treasury; who, after having exchanged their full powers, have agreed to the following articles:

ARTICLE I.

The debts due by France to citizens of the United States, contracted before the 8th of Vendémiaire, ninth year of the French Republic, (30th September, 1800,) shall be paid according to the following regulations, with interest at six per cent., to commence from the periods when the accounts and vouchers were presented to the French Government.

ARTICLE II.

The debts provided for by the preceding article are those whose result is comprised in the conjectural note annexed to the present convention, and which, with the interest, cannot exceed the sum of twenty millions of francs. The claims comprised in the said note which fall within the exceptions of the following articles, shall not be admitted to the benefit of this provision.

ARTICLE III.

The principal and interests of the said debts shall be discharged by the United States, by orders drawn by their Minister Plenipotentiary on their treasury; these orders shall be payable sixty days after the exchange of ratifications of the treaty and the conventions signed this day, and after possession shall be given of Louisiana by the commissaries of France to those of the United States.

ARTICLE IV.

It is expressly agreed that the preceding articles shall comprehend no debts but such as are due to citizens of the United States, who have been and are yet creditors of France, for supplies, for embargoes, and prizes made at sea, in which the appeal has been properly lodged within the time mentioned in the said convention, 8th Vendémiaire, ninth year, (30th September, 1800.)

ARTICLE V.

The preceding articles shall apply only, 1st, to captures of which the council of prizes shall have ordered restitution, it being well understood that the claimant cannot have recourse to the United States, otherwise than he might have had to the Government of the French Republic, and only in case of insufficiency of the captors; 2d, the debts mentioned in the said fifth article of the convention contracted before the 8th Vendémiaire, an 9, (30th September, 1800,) the payment of which has been heretofore claimed of the actual Government of France, and for which the creditors have a right to the protection of the United States; the said fifth article does not comprehend prizes whose condemnation has been or shall be confirmed: it is the express intention of the contracting parties not to extend the benefit of the present convention to reclamations of American citizens, who shall have established houses of commerce in France, England, or other countries than the United States, in partnership with foreigners, and who by that reason and the nature of their commerce ought to be regarded as domiciliated in the places where such houses exist. All agreements and bargains concerning merchandize, which shall not be the property of American citizens, are equally excepted from the benefit of the said convention, saving, however, to such persons their claims in like manner as if this treaty had not been made.

ARTICLE VI.

And that the different questions which may arise under the preceding article may be fairly investigated, the Ministers Plenipotentiary of the United States shall name three persons, who shall act from the present and provisionally, and who shall have full power to examine, without removing the documents, all the accounts of the different claims already liquidated by the bureaus established for this purpose by the French Republic, and to ascertain whether they belong to the classes designated by the present convention and the principles established in it; or if they are not in one of its exceptions and on their certificate, declaring that the debt is due to an American citizen or his representative, and that it existed before the 8th Vendémiaire, 9th year, (30th September, 1800,) the debtor shall be entitled to an order on the treasury of the United States, in the manner prescribed by the third article.

ARTICLE VII.

The same agents shall likewise have power, without removing the documents, to examine the claims which are prepared for verification, and to certify those which ought to be admitted by uniting the necessary qualifications, and not being comprised in the exceptions contained in the present convention.

ARTICLE VIII.

The same agents shall likewise examine the claims which are not prepared for liquidation, and certify in writing those which in their judgment ought to be admitted to liquidation.

ARTICLE IX.

In proportion as the debts mentioned in these articles shall be admitted, they shall be discharged with interest, at six per cent., by the treasury of the United States.

ARTICLE X.

And that no debt which shall not not have the qualifications above mentioned, and that no unjust or exorbitant demand may be admitted, the commercial agent of the United States at Paris, or such other agent as the Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States shall think proper to nominate, shall assist at the operations of the bureaus, and co-operate in the examination of the claims; and if this agent shall be of opinion that any debt is not completely proved, or if he shall judge that it is not comprised in the principles of the fifth article above mentioned, and if, notwithstanding his opinion, the bureaus established by the French Government should think that it ought to be liquidated, he shall transmit his observations to the board established by the United States, who, without removing documents, shall make a complete examination of the debt and vouchers which support it, and report the result to the Minister of the United States. The Minister of the United States shall transmit his observations, in all such cases, to the Minister of the Treasury of the French Republic, on whose report the French Government shall decide definitively in every case.

The rejection of any claim shall have no other effect than to exempt the United States from the payment of it, the French Government reserving to itself the right to decide definitively on such claim so far as it concerns itself.

ARTICLE XI.

Every necessary decision shall be made in the course of a year, to commence from the exchange of ratifications, and no reclamation shall be admitted afterwards.

ARTICLE XII.

In case of claims for debts contracted by the Government of France with citizens of the United States since the 8th Vendémiaire, ninth year, (30th September, 1800,) not being comprised in this convention, may be pursued, and the payment demanded in the same manner as if it had not been made.

ARTICLE XIII.

The present convention shall be ratified in good and due form, and the ratifications shall be exchanged in six months from the date of the signature of the Ministers Plenipotentiary, or sooner if possible.

In faith of which, the respective Ministers Plenipotentiary have signed the above articles both in the French and English languages, declaring, nevertheless, that the present treaty has been originally agreed on and written in the French language; to which they have hereunto affixed their seals.

STATEMENT CONCERNING THE BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS.

In pursuance of the terms of Article VI of the convention between the United States and the French Republic concluded April 30, 1803, Robert R. Livingston and James Monroe, ministers plenipotentiary from the United States to France, on the 18th of May, 1803, appointed John Mercer, Isaac Cox Barnet, and William Maclure as commissioners "for the purpose of examining, verifying, and finally liquidating the claims of citizens of the Unite l States" against the Republic of France.

The board of commissioners sat at Paris from July 5, 1803, to December 1, 1804. The following is an extract from their report made April 30, 1804, to Robert R. Livingston, and states the character of the questions into which they considered it their duty to inquire in the discharge of their trust:

The principles which we have deduced from the convention of the 30th of April, 1803, and applied to the claims, were noticed generally in our letter to you of the 22d of March; but it may not be improper to repeat them here. We consider the claims of American citizens upon the French Government, due under the convention of 1800, as directed to be settled according to the regulations and principles established in that under which we were appointed. We have therefore considered it our duty to inquire—

(1) Whether the debt was due in its origin to an American citizen.

(2) Whether it existed before the 30th of September, 1800.

(3) Has such American citizen established a house of commerce in foreign countries, in partnership with foreigners?

(4) Can he by the nature of his commerce be considered as domiciliated abroad?

(5) Has he under the circumstances of his case a right to the protection of the United States?

(6) Was the merchandise or other property American when it passed into the hands of the French Government?

(7) Does the claim arise from supplies, embargoes, or captures made at sea, excluding from the word supplies freight, indemnity, and demurrage, except when they are claimed as being incidental to embargoes?

(8) In prize cases we shall examine whether order of restitution has been made by the council of prizes, whether the insufficiency of the captors is shown.

(9) We consider it correct to examine the cases upon the conjectural note before any other, to decide upon them according to their respective dates, when the state of the papers will allow us to preserve this order.

(10) We consider it a fair construction of the convention that we have no authority to direct any liquidation after the 20,000,000 of livres shall be covered, and that our duties here will terminate on the 21st of October next, that being the day, according to our information, which will complete the year from the time when the ratification was exchanged at Washington.

LIST OF THE NAMES OF PERSONS AND OF VESSELS.

A list of the names of persons and of vessels concerned in the cases submitted to the commissioners appointed to examine, verify, and liquidate certain claims, under the provisions of the Convention between the United States and the French Republic, concluded April 30, 1803, and which were admitted as valid.

[This list has been compiled from the register of the commission. As the functions of the commissioners were confined to the determination of the validity of these claims, in accordance with the terms of the convention, and to the certification of such as were admitted for liquidation to the French Bureau of Liquidation, where the amounts to be paid the claimants were estimated, the register referred to contains no record of the awards. For information as to the payments in settlement of these claims, reference should be made to the detailed statement furnished by the Secretary of the Treasury, pages 8 to 21, of this document.]

[N. B.—The notes at foot of this list are numbered and answer to the respective numbers of the claims.]

Numbers.	Names of vessels and masters.	Original claimants.	Special agents or transferees.	Nature of the claims.	Amount of principal claimed.	The sums mentioned in the following three columns as being allowed (or "liquidated") by the French Council of Liquidation have been taken from tables made by the commercial agent of the United States at Paris, in October, 1804. It is not certain that full payment has been made according to the said liquidations. It is believed that some have been reduced, and it appears from several printed Memoirs of F. Skipwith that claim No. 14 on the following list has been reduced by a subsequent arrêté of the French Council of Liquidation of April, 1806, to 49,490 livres.

List of claims NOT found upon the conjectural note and admitted by the American Board.

COPY OF THE CERTIFICATE ANNEXED TO THE VOUCHERS IN EVERY CASE.

The undersigned American commissioners, named in virtue of the 6th article of the Convention concluded between the French Republic and the United States of America the 30th of April, 1803 (10th Floréal, 11th year of the French Republic), do certify to the Council General of Liquidation, established by the French Government, that, having attentively examined the documents certified to them in the case of for they are of opinion that this claim is fully embraced by the principles of the said Convention, and ought to be admitted to liquidation, with interest at 6 per cent. per annum, from the period at which the accompts and vouchers belonging to it were presented to the French Government, provided the amount of principal and interest found due upon those already directed for liquidation, and determined to be within the Convention, shall not exceed the sum of twenty millions of livres. This liquidation is to stand according to the date of the claims against the French Government, and in reference to the respective periods at which other claims, not found on the conjectural note, originated.

The agent of the United States, appointed, in virtue of the 10th article of the said Convention to take cognizance of the documents and vouchers, and of the preparatory work in the bureaux of the Council General of Liquidation, relative to American claims, shall notify in writing to the undersigned the liquidation which shall be made upon the aforesaid claim, as soon as the same shall be rendered.

Given under their hands, at their office, this day of , A. D. 180 , corresponding to the day of in the year of the French Republic.

[N. B.—The notes at foot of this list are numbered and answer to the respective numbers of the claims.]

* Property captured—restitution ordered by the Council of Prizes.

List of claims found upon the conjectural note and rejected by the American Board.

FORM OF THE CERTIFICATE OF REJECTION TRANSMITTED IN EVERY CASE TO THE BUREAU OF LIQUIDATION—TAKEN FROM THE REGISTER OF THE BOARD'S TRANSACTIONS.

The case of (originating in the year of the French Republic and marked No. on the conjectural note). The Board having fully examined the documents and vouchers regularly certified to them in this case, and which are to be considered as a part of this record, and having duly attended to all the proofs produced in relation to it, are of opinion that the said claim is excluded from the benefit of the Conv·ntion of the 30th April, 1803, between the United States and France, and ought not to be certified for liquidation to the French bureau.

[N. B.—The notes at foot of this list are numbered and answer to the respective numbers of the claims.]

Numbers.	Names of vessels and masters.	Original claimants.	Special agents.	Nature of the claims.	Amount of principal claimed.	The sums mentioned in the following three columns as being allowed (or "liquidated") by the French Council of Liquidation have been taken from tables made by the commercial agent of the United States at Paris in October, 1804. It is believed that many claims have been admitted since by the French offices and the minister of the United States.

FORM OF THE CERTIFICATE OF REJECTION TRANSMITTED IN EVERY CASE TO THE BUREAU OF LIQUIDATION—TAKEN FROM THE REGISTER OF THE BOARD'S TRANSACTIONS.

The case of originating in the year of the French Republic and marked No. on the supplementary list The board having fully examined the documents and vouchers regularly certified to them in this case (not found upon the conjectural note), and which are to be considered as a part of this record, and having duly attended to all the proofs produced in relation to it, are of the opinion that the said claim is excluded from the benefit of the Convention of the 30th April, 1803, between the United States and France, and ought not to be certified for liquidation to the French bureau.

(N. B.—The notes at the foot of this list are numbered and answer to the respective numbers of the claims.)

CONVENTION BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND FRANCE

Concluded July 4, 1831.

The United States of America and His Majesty the King of the French, animated with an equal desire to adjust amicably, and in a manner conformable to equity, as well as to the relations of good intelligence and sincere friendship which unite the two countries, the reclamations formed by the respective Governments, have, for this purpose, named for their Plenipotentiaries, to wit:

The President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, William C. Rives, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the said United States, near His Majesty the King of the French, and His Majesty the King of the French, Count Horace Sebastiani, Lieutenant General of his Armies, his Minister Secretary of State for the Department of Foreign Affairs, &c., &c.;

Who, after having exchanged their full powers, found in good and due form, have agreed upon the following articles:

ARTICLE V.

As to the reclamations of French citizens against the Government of the United States, and the reclamations of citizens of the United States against the French Government, which are of a different nature from those which it is the object of the present convention to adjust, it is understood that the citizens of the two nations may prosecute them in the respective countries before the competent judicial or administrative authorities, in complying with the laws and regulations of the country, the dispositions and benefit of which shall be applied to them, in like manner as to native citizens.

ARTICLE VI.

The French Government and the Government of the United States reciprocally engage to communicate to each other, by the intermediary of the respective legations, the documents, titles, or other informations proper to facilitate the examination and liquidation of the reclamations comprised in the stipulations of the present convention.

ARTICLE VII.

The wines of France, from and after the exchange of the ratifications of the present convention, shall be admitted to consumption in the States of the Union at duties which shall not exceed the following rates, by the gallon, (such as it is used at present for wines in the United States,) to wit: six cents for red wines in casks; ten cents for white wines in casks; and twenty-two cents for wines of all sorts in bottles. The proportion existing between the duties on French wines thus reduced, and the general rates of the tariff which went into operation the first of January, 1829, shall be maintained, in case the Government of the United States should think proper to diminish those general rates in a new tariff.

In consideration of this stipulation, which shall be binding on the United States for ten years, the French Government abandons the reclamations which it had formed in relation to the 8th article of the treaty of cession of Louisiana. It engages, moreover, to establish on the long staple cottons of the United States, which, after the exchange of the ratifications of the present convention, shall be brought directly thence to France by the vessels of the United States, or by French vessels, the same duties as on short staple cottons.

ARTICLE VIII.

The present convention shall be ratified, and the ratifications shall be exchanged at Washington, in the space of eight months, or sooner if possible.

In faith of which, the respective Plenipotentiaries have signed these articles, and thereto set their seals.

Done at Paris the fourth day of the month of July, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-one.

TREATY WITH SPAIN, FEBRUARY 22, 1819.

ARTICLE IX.

The two high contracting parties, animated with the most earnest desire of conciliation, and with the object of putting an end to all the differences which have existed between them, and of confirming the good understanding which they wish to be forever maintained between them, reciprocally renounce all claims for damages or injuries which they, themselves, as well as their respective citizens and subjects, may have suffered until the time of signing this treaty.

The renunciation of the United States will extend to all the injuries mentioned in the convention of the 11th of August, 1802.

2. To all claims on account of prizes made by French privateers, and condemned by French Consuls, within the territory and jurisdiction of Spain.

3. To all claims of indemnities on account of the suspension of the right of deposit at New Orleans in 1802.

4. To all claims of citizens of the United States upon the Government of Spain, arising from the unlawful seizures at sea, and in the ports and territories of Spain, or the Spanish colonies.

5. To all claims of citizens of the United States upon the Spanish Government, statements of which, soliciting the interposition of the Government of the United States, have been presented to the Department of State, or to the Minister of the United States in Spain, since the date of the convention of 1802, and until the signature of this treaty.

The renunciation of His Catholic Majesty extends—

1. To all the injuries mentioned in the convention of the 11th of August, 1802.

2. To the sums which His Catholic Majesty advanced for the return of Captain Pike from the Provincias Internas.

3. To all injuries caused by the expedition of Miranda, that was fitted out and equipped at New York.

4. To all claims of Spanish subjects upon the Government of the United States arising from unlawful seizures at sea, or within the ports and territorial jurisdiction of the United States.

Finally, to all the claims of subjects of His Catholic Majesty upon the Government of the United States in which the interposition of His Catholic Majesty's Government has been solicited, before the date of this treaty and since the date of the convention of 1802, or which may have been made to the department of foreign affairs of His Majesty, or to his Minister in the United States.

And the high contracting parties, respectively, renounce all claim to indemnities for any of the recent events or transactions of their respective commanders and officers in the Floridas.

The United States will cause satisfaction to be made for the injuries, if any, which by process of law, shall be established to have been suffered by the Spanish officers, and individual Spanish inhabitants, by the late operations of the American Army in Florida.

ARTICLE X.

The convention entered into between the two Governments, on the 11th of August, 1802, the ratifications of which were exchanged the 21st December, 1818, is annulled.

ARTICLE XI.

The United States, exonerating Spain from all demands in future, on account of the claims of their citizens to which the renunciations herein contained extend, and considering them entirely cancelled, undertake to make satisfaction for the same, to an amount not exceeding five million of dollars. To ascertain the full amount and validity of those claims, a commission, to consist of three Commissioners, citizens of the United States, shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, which commission shall meet at the city of Washington, and, within the space of three years from the time of their first meeting, shall receive, examine, and decide upon the amount and validity of all the claims included within the descriptions above mentioned. The said Commissioners shall take an oath or affirmation, to be entered on the record of their proceedings, for the faithful and diligent discharge of their duties; and, in case of the death, sickness, or necessary absence of any such Commissioner, his place may be supplied by the appointment, as aforesaid, or by the President of the United States, during the recess of the Senate, of another Commissioner in his stead. The said Commissioners shall be authorized to hear and examine, on oath, every question relative to the said claims, and to receive all suitable authentic testimony concerning the same. And the Spanish Government shall furnish all such documents and elucidations as may be in their possession, for the adjustment of the said claims, according to the principles of justice, the laws of nations, and the stipulations of the treaty between the two parties of 27th October, 1795; the said documents to be specified, when demanded, at the instance of the said Commissioners.

The payment of such claims as may be admitted and adjusted by the said Commissioners, or the major part of them, to an amount not exceeding five millions of dollars, shall be made by the United States, either immediately at their Treasury, or by the creation of stock, bearing an interest of six per cent. per annum, payable from the proceeds of sales of public lands within the territories hereby ceded to the United States, or in such other manner as the Congress of the United States may prescribe by law.

The records of the proceedings of the said Commissioners, together with the vouchers and documents produced before them, relative to the claims to be adjusted and decided upon by them, shall, after the close of their transactions, be deposited in the Department of State of the United States; and copies of them, or any part of them, shall be furnished to the Spanish Government, if required, at the demand of the Spanish Minister in the United States.

AWARDS BY COMMISSIONERS APPOINTED JUNE 8, 1821.

The commissioners appointed by the President June 8, 1821, to carry into effect the 11th Article of a treaty concluded between the United States and Spain, February 22, 1819, were: Hugh Lawson White, of Tennessee; William King, of Maine; Littleton Walter Tazewell, of Virginia.

They formed themselves in a board June 9, 1821, and finally adjourned June 8, 1824.

Alphabetical list of vessels and contracts upon which allowances have been made, showing the full amount awarded in each case, and the memorialists among whom it is to be distributed, as well as the sum to be paid under each memorial, without any abatement by the commissioners under treaty with Spain in 1819.

49TH CONGRESS, 1st Session. } SENATE. { Ex. Doc. No. 99.

REPORT

U. S. NICARAGUA SURVEYING PARTY,

1885,

BY CIVIL ENGINEER A. G. MENOCAL, U. S. N.

WASHINGTON:
GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE.
1886.

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES.

APRIL 22, 1886.

Resolved, That the usual number of Senate Executive Document No. 99, first session, Forty-ninth Congress, being the report of Mr. Menocal on the Interoceanic Canal, be printed, omitting the photographic illustrations.

Attest:

ANSON G. McCOOK,
Secretary.

LETTER

FROM

THE SECRETARY OF THE NAVY,

TRANSMITTING,

In response to Senate resolution January 29, 1886, drawings and report of survey of Nicaraguan Canal

---

MARCH 16, 1886.—Referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations and ordered to be printed.

NAVY DEPARTMENT,
Washington, March 15, 1886.

SIR: In compliance with the resolution of the Senate passed January 29, 1886, I have the honor to transmit herewith "copies of drawings and report of a recent survey of the Nicaraguan Canal route," made by Civil Engineer A. G. Menocal, of the Navy.

Very respectfully,

W. C. WHITNEY,
Secretary of the Navy.

Hon. JOHN SHERMAN,
President pro tempore United States Senate.

NAVY DEPARTMENT,
Washington, D. C., December 15, 1884.

SIR: A treaty has been lately concluded with Nicaragua which gives to the United States the right to build a canal across the Isthmus within the territory of that Republic, following the most available route from ocean to ocean. This route will be fixed by United States engineers, but is understood to be substantially that already selected, and with which you are familiar.

Because of your long service and great interest in this canal, and your thorough knowledge of the projected work and the country it is to traverse, you have been selected to proceed to Nicaragua to perform certain preliminary labors in connection with it, and it is expected that you will sail for Aspinwall by the steamer from New York of the 20th instant. Your movements after that are left largely to your discretion, but it is expected that you will leave Panama for Nicaragua as soon as the officers of your party and the camp equipage have been transported on board the naval vessel which will there await you, and you will land at Corinto, Nicaragua, at as early a date as practicable.

The commander of the naval vessel at Panama will be properly instructed.

After your arrival you will direct your attention to the direction of the surveys already made, and particularly to any change in route which has been suggested as possibly available for shortening the canal and diminishing its cost.

Should the Nicaraguan Government desire your knowledge on the subject to assist them in making clear the advantages to Nicaragua of the treaty, you will aid them as seems to you proper under the circumstances.

Unless otherwise instructed, you will leave Nicaragua and return to the United States not later than the 1st of April next, at which time a vessel will be at Corinto to convey you to Panama, if desired, whence you will secure passage for yourself and party to New York.

At the proper time you will communicate, by telegraph or otherwise, to the commander of this vessel, informing him as to the probable date of the arrival of your party at Corinto.

It is unnecessary to inform you that the treaty, not having been ratified, has not the force of law and is not finally binding upon the two Governments.

In the event of your finding no naval vessel at Panama upon your arrival, you will proceed to Corinto at your discretion.

Very respectfully,

WM. E. CHANDLER,
Secretary of the Navy.

Civil Engineer A. G. MENOCAL, U. S. N.,
Navy-Yard, Washington, D. C.

SURVEY OF THE NICARAGUAN CANAL ROUTE.

UNITED STATES NAVY-YARD,
Washington, November, 1885.

SIR: I have the honor to submit a report of the work performed and the results accomplished by the surveying party lately operating in Nicaragua for the purpose of rectifying the location for an interoceanic canal previously made by orders of the Department.

The report of Commander (now Captain) E. P. Lull, U. S. N., of the work done and results obtained by the United States surveying expedition in 1872–'73, of which this report may be regarded as a supplement, contains such a full description of the country, its inhabitants, and other salient features, as to render it unnecessary for me to dwell upon these subjects. I will, therefore, enter at once upon the report of our movements and labors, beginning from the date of the orders.

FITTING OUT AND SAILING OF THE PARTY.

After collecting all the note field-books and original maps of previous surveying expeditions in Nicaragua, and other important papers pertaining to the canal question, I left Washington on the evening of December 17, 1884, for New York. The 18th, 19th, and morning of the 20th were spent in selecting and purchasing certain outfits, and in properly packing and freighting in the Pacific mail steamer Colon the tents, instruments, and other articles needed for the equipment of the surveying party. In this work I was most efficiently assisted by Commander H. B. Robeson, U. S. N., navigation officer of the navy-yard, New York, who kindly volunteered to supervise the packing of the several articles, and to whose care and foresight was due in a great measure the safe transportation of the same.

On the morning of December 20, Civil Engineer R. E. Peary, U. S. N., and Ensign W. I. Chambers, U. S. N., reported for duty in connection with the proposed surveys, and at noon of the same day the party sailed from New York on the steamer Colon.

We arrived at Aspinwall in the afternoon of December 29. The necessary arrangements were immediately made with Captain J. N. Dow, general agent of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company on the Isthmus, and with Mr. George A. Burt, the superintendent of the Panama Railroad, for the prompt discharge of the freight pertaining to the expedition and its transfer by rail, without loss of time, to Panama, and it was due to the marked courtesy and kindness of these gentlemen in giving the matter their personal attention that no delay was experienced in that particular. The afternoon train had already left for Panama, but having received an invitation to go across on a special train furnished to Mr. Theodore de Sabla, one of the directors of the road and a passenger on the Colon from New York, I left Messrs. Peary and Chambers on board the steamer to look after the freight and baggage, and left myself for Panama, with a view to communicate next morning with the commanding officer of the U. S. S. Lackawanna, lying in the bay. Owing to low tide, however, boats could not approach the landings until a late hour, and it was near noon of the 30th when I was able to board that vessel. I delivered to Capt. A. P. Cooke the Department's communication, of which I was the bearer, and this officer informed me that he would be ready to sail for Corinto, Nicaragua, as soon as our equipage could be brought on board.

Upon my return ashore I was met by Messrs. Peary and Chambers, who had arrived at Panama about 11 a. m., bringing with them all the personal baggage and the instruments. Before leaving Aspinwall they had seen all the freight belonging to the party discharged from the steamer and placed on the wharf, ready to be taken on board the cars, and later in the day I received a telegram from the railroad company's officials to the effect that the freight would be forwarded at the first opportunity.

It was evident that with one holiday intervening and having to contend with the difficulties attending low tides in the forenoon, our luggage, even if promptly transferred by the railroad, could not be taken on board the Lackawanna before the 2d of January, and it was decided to profit by this unavoidable delay in making an inspection of the works of the Panama Canal. Mr. Burt, the superintendent of the Panama Railroad, having been informed by T. de Sabla of my desire and intention to do so, kindly furnished me with a free pass for myself and the officers of the party, to be used on all passenger trains, with the right to stop at all stations.

The 31st of December and 1st of January were spent on the line of the canal, leaving Panama at 7 in the morning and returning at 6 in the evening. All parts of the canal where important works were going on were carefully examined and complete notes made on a map of the work. On the afternoon of January 2, the baggage and equipage having been placed on board the Lackawanna, the ship left Panama at 4 p. m., and after a pleasant and uneventful trip arrived at Corinto at 1 p. m. on the 7th.

It had been my desire to arrive at Corinto in time to enable me, by rapid traveling, to reach Granada on the 7th of January, so as to leave that place on the regular trip of the mail steamer for Greytown on the morning of the 8th, and thus be enabled to commence the work of the survey about the 12th of the same month. The unavoidable delay at Panama and the slow speed of the Lackawanna, however, defeated that part of the plan of operations. Our departure from Granada was necessarily postponed until the 18th and the beginning of the work put off not less than ten days.

Immediately after landing I informed President Cardenas, by telegraph, of the arrival of the party and of the object of our visit. A reply was soon received extending to us a hearty welcome to the country, and stating that orders would be sent to the proper authorities to pass our personal baggage and camp equipage through the custom-house without previous examination, and for the transportation of the same and of the officers over the National Railroad, extending from Corinto to Masaya, free of charge. Messages of welcome and congratulations were also received from the minister of the treasury, Mr. Elizondo, and other high officials; and the governor of Corinto called in person to offer his services, both in his official and private capacity.

Captain Cooke had decided to visit the capital with some of the officers of his ship, and as nothing could be lost by a delay of one day, and the departure from Granada for the river San Juan being controlled by the movements of the only steamer plying on Lake Nicaragua, it was decided to remain in port until the 9th, the day fixed by the captain for his departure.

The 8th was spent in packing a quantity of provisions obtained from Paymaster Thomson, U. S. N., of the Lackawanna, for the use of the party in the field, pending the arrival of those purchased in New York and sent as freight by way of Greytown. Mr. Chambers made good use of his time taking photographic views of the buildings and other objects of interest in and around the place.

At noon of the 9th we left Corinto by rail, arriving at Momotombo at 4.30 p. m., where we were compelled to stop for the night. Momotombo is the terminus of the northern section of the Nicaragua Railroad, at the northwestern end of Lake Managua, close to the base of the volcano of the same name. This volcano, a perfect cone, 7,000 feet above the surface of the water, rises majestically from a peninsula projecting into the lake and forming a picturesque little bay, on the shore of which the wharf and railroad station are situated. At this point the passengers and freight are transferred to a small steamer and carried to Managua, the capital of the Republic, where connection is made with the other section of the road, extending now to Masaya, and in course of construction as far as Granada. Mr. Chambers took some photographic views of the superb panorama before us, and after supervising the transfer of our luggage and outfits to the steamer we repaired to the hotel and retired for the night. A delightful cool lake breeze added greatly to the attractive charms of the locality, and contributed, with the soothing sound of the light surf of the lake breaking on the sandy beach, to a recuperating sleep after the heat of the day. Five o'clock next morning had been fixed by the captain of the steamer as the hour of leaving, but at 2 o'clock the whistle commenced to blow, the passengers were aroused, the little hotel thrown into great commotion, and after taking some bread and coffee and a hasty walk on the beach, we found ourselves on board the little craft. She left the wharf at 3 a. m., arriving at Managua at 7.30 a. m., a distance of about thirty miles.

President Cardenas, who had been absent from the capital on account of a death in his family, was returning from the town of Rivas on the afternoon of the day of our arrival. The minister of the treasury kindly extended to us an invitation to go with a party of Government officials in a special train to meet his excellency at Masaya and escort him to the capital. This act of courtesy was accepted with the same cordiality in which it was offered, and leaving Managua at 2 p. m. we arrived at Masaya at 3 o'clock, the distance of 21 miles having been run in just an hour. The President extended us a very hearty welcome. The train returning to Managua at 5.15 p. m. At noon on the 11th, Captain Cooke, with the officers of the Lackawanna and the surveying party, called in a body to pay an official visit to the President, who extended us a cordial reception, in the course of which he emphatically expressed the hope that the American Congress would ratify the pending canal treaty, as he felt confident the Nicaraguan Congress would do without serious opposition, and that he would be thus fortunate enough to see the work inaugurated during the time of his administration. During the 11th and 12th I had private interviews with his excellency, in which he repeatedly manifested a decided interest in favor of the construction of the canal and a desire to promote and assist in the proposed surveys. He gave me letters for the prefect of Granada, the agent of the Nicaraguan Steam Navigation Company, and for the governors at San Carlos, Fort Castillo, and San Juan del Norte (Greytown), directing their unqualified support in all matters pertaining to the work. These instructions were found, later, of much value, in the assistance rendered by those officials in enlisting the proper men for the work, in excluding all men thus engaged from forced military service, and in other matters which contributed in a marked degree to our comfort and the better success of the survey.

On the morning of the 13th we left Managua in a special train furnished by the Government. Upon arriving at Masaya, at that time the terminus of the road, the freight and luggage were placed on two carts and started immediately for Granada. We followed at 11.30 a. m. in carriages, arriving at that town at 1.30 p. m. From that day to the 19th our time was employed in overhauling the instruments and camp equipage, in obtaining additional outfits, and in enlisting a number of natives as macheteros. The compensation agreed upon for these men was 20 soles per month, food and transportation each way. Mr. Enrique Cole, the son of an American citizen, was engaged as rodman at the rate of 60 soles per month, board and transportation. This young man had been employed by me on similar work some years before, and had rendered good service. Mr. Peary made adjustments of the transit, gradienter, &c., and Mr. Chambers devoted his time to adjusting his level and taking photographs of objects of interest in and about the city.

I had been informed by the Department at Washington that Passed Assistant Surgeon John F. Bransford, U. S. N., had been ordered to proceed from the South Pacific Station to Panama, and there report to me for duty in connection with the surveying expedition. Failing to reach Panama before our departure for Corinto, I left instructions for him, with the American consul at that place, to proceed upon the first opportunity to Nicaragua, and report to me there, in compliance with his orders. Arriving at San Juan del Sur on the 14th, he reported by telegraph and was ordered to proceed to Granada without delay and report in person, which he did on the morning of the 17th. The party was now properly organized and equipped and ready for work, waiting only for transportation. This had been somewhat delayed by injuries received by the lake steamer, and an effort of the company to make the necessary repairs thereto. On the morning of the 19th the party left Granada with all the necessary equipage, nine natives, and two men enlisted as cooks, and second chainman. On the following morning we arrived at San Carlos, the outlet of Lake Nicaragua. Here another delay of twenty-four hours was caused by the transfer of freight on the river steamer for Greytown. Two canoes, with their necessary paddles, were engaged at 65 cents per day for the two, for use in the survey; and on the morning of the 21st another start was made down the river San Juan, which took us to Castillo Rapids, 37 miles from the lake, at 11.30 a. m. The balance of the day was spent here in another transfer to a third steamer at the foot of the rapids. Messrs. Peary and Chambers utilized a part of the time in exploring the surroundings and in taking photographs of the old historic Spanish fort and other places of interest in that picturesque locality.

FIELD-WORK.

Early on the morning of the 22d we left Castillo, in hopes to reach our point of destination in time to land the equipage and outfit, put up the tents, make ourselves comfortable for the night, and complete the necessary preparations to start the work of survey on the following day.

I had in contemplation two important modifications of the canal line located by the United States surveying expedition of 1872–'73, either of which, if found to be practicable, would shorten the distance very materially; simplify the engineering problem by the elimination of sharp curves, and a reduction of the watershed that had to be taken care of, by the old location, and diminish the cost considerably.

One of these changes consisted in the construction of a dam just below the confluence of the rivers San Juan and Sarapiqui, by which 22¾ additional miles of the San Juan River could be made navigable, and the actual canal excavation, from the dam to Greytown, reduced to about 21 miles, through a comparatively level country. Col. O. W. Childs, a well-known American engineer, who, in 1850–'51, made the first careful instrumental survey for a canal by this route for the "American Atlantic and Pacific Ship-Canal Company," had proposed to raise the waters of the river about 14 feet by the construction of a dam at that point; and later, in 1879, Mr. Blanchett, an enthusiastic Frenchman, had proposed to convert the river above that point into an extension of the lake, by the construction of a dam 74 feet high at the same place. While engaged in the United States Government surveys of 1872–'73, and in subsequent trips by the river in later years, I had occasion to observe high land on both sides of the river at that point, but I had no opportunity to make a careful examination of the right bank of the river with a view to secure slackwater navigation down to that point, and it was my purpose now to definitely establish the practicability of that problem by a thorough investigation of all the facts connected therewith.

The other proposed change consisted in locating a line from Greytown direct to the valley of the river San Francisco, and through this valley to the river San Juan. This route suggested itself to me while surveying the basin of the river San Juanillo in 1876, and again in 1880, in a reconnaissance undertaken for the purpose of obtaining further information on the same subject. Limited time and insufficient means prevented me from carrying an instrumental examination across the "divide" and into the valley of the San Francisco, and I was, to my great disappointment, compelled to abandon the exploration while there yet remained about eight miles to connect with my preliminary survey of the valley of the San Francisco in 1873. However, I went far enough to satisfy me that there was no serious obstacle in the way to prevent the location of such a line; and to establish its practicability beyond doubt, by an instrumental survey, was, in my opinion, essential before the final route could be regarded as located.

It was decided to first examine the location for a dam at Sarapiqui, all future operations to be subordinate to the result of our investigation at this point. The party arrived at the confluence of that river with the San Juan at 2.30 p. m. of the 22d; the stores and equipage were immediately landed, the ground cleared of the undergrowth and the tents set up, so that by 5 o'clock the stores were properly protected from the weather, dinner served to all hands, and every one made as comfortable as the circumstances would permit. The day had been showery, and the ground being uncomfortably damp, the necessary precautions were taken to avoid sickness.

Soon after landing a disagreeable incident took place, which I feared at the time might prove a serious obstacle in the prosecution of the survey. The custom-house officer of the Government of Costa Rica, stationed at that place, informed me that while he would not object to our camp being established on Costa Rican territory or to the prosecution of the land survey, he could not permit an examination of the river Sarapiqui, or even an ascent of that stream, without previous instructions from his Government. I assured him that our mission was of a peaceful nature and directly in the interest of Central America in general and of Nicaragua and Costa Rica in particular—the two states especially benefited by the construction of the canal; and even showed him a telegram from the President of Nicaragua, dated the 18th of the same month, by which I was informed that the President of Costa Rica would direct her employés not to place any obstructions in the way of the proposed explorations and surveys. That officer, however, seemed determined to carry out his decision, and said that while he firmly believed the character of our mission to be as I had represented, yet his instructions were such that he could not consent to a survey of the river without gross violation of his duty. He would, however, start a courier immediately for the interior, and in about ten days he had no doubt a satisfactory answer would be received. I was much annoyed by this unexpected check at the start, but continued to make our preparations to commence the work of cross-sectioning the river San Juan, and to carry the survey as far as practicable into the country lying between the rivers San Juan and Sarapiqui, trusting that in the mean time matters would take a more favorable aspect. It will be seen hereafter that I was not disappointed in my expectations, and that the Government of Costa Rica disapproved the action of this employé, and instructed him, and also the commandant at the mouth of the river San Carlos, to render me any assistance in their power.

On the morning of the 23d I left camp, Mr. Peary, Mr. Cole, the rodman, and nine men, and, beginning at a point on the left bank of the river San Juan, started the first cross-section connecting two elevations favorably located on either side of the river as abutments for a dam. Mr. Chambers remained in camp to straighten up matters while the transit line was being advanced sufficiently to allow the running of the spirit-level. But little advance could be made in the forenoon, as Mr. Peary and myself had all we could attend to in initiating the green hands in a work entirely novel to them. However, by noon they were pretty well broken in and the always difficult and arduous operation of cutting a trail through the dense forest and undergrowth, interwoven with thorny vines, was progressing well, but slowly. Mr. Peary succeeded in carrying the transit line to the summit of the hill on the right bank, a distance of about 1,200 feet from the water's edge. This elevation was found by the pocket aneroid to be 175 feet above the water in the river. In the mean time, I had been questioning Mr. Dezman, an old resident at the mouth of the Sarapiqui, and supposed to be well informed as to the topography of the neighboring country. He stated that a wet swamp extended for several miles back of the hill on the right, and that this swamp was drained by two creeks; one emptying into the San Juan but a short distance below, the other into the Sarapiqui about two miles above its mouth. In times of flood he thought the headwaters of these creeks were united, thus converting the hill in question, as it were, into an island. The information was unquestionably but little encouraging to the end we had in view, but I was not disposed to give up the idea of the proposed improvement in location on the strength of his statements. I decided to satisfy myself of the facts by personal investigation, and to that end I felt the pressing need of exploring at once the Sarapiqui and the creek mentioned by Mr. Dezman. I concluded, therefore, to make another effort to obtain the consent of the Costa Rican officer, and for that purpose I made an official call, in course of which I succeeded in securing the privilege of ascending the river in boats, provided no instrumental survey was undertaken previous to receiving the consent of his Government.

Early on the morning of the 24th, Mr. Peary was directed to continue his survey of the previous day down the southern side of the hill, and, in case he should descend to the level of the immediate banks of the San Juan, to make a reconnaissance westerly and around its base, with a view, rather to satisfy himself whether there existed any connection with a continuous range extending to the interior, than to make a formal survey of the locality. Mr. Chambers was ordered to ascend the Sarapiqui in a canoe as far as practicable, so that he could return to camp by sundown, to examine the characteristics of the stream, the height of the banks and of the adjacent valleys, and to obtain such other information as might be of interest in connection with the problem. I went in another canoe with Dr. Bransford and five men up the same river, and when about one-and-a-half miles from the San Juan entered a narrow creek coming from the right bank. We traveled about eight miles in a southeasterly direction and found the ground on both sides very low and swampy, generally below high-water mark, as indicated by driftwood and even large logs lodged in the branches of trees on the banks. At several places I left the canoe and made examinations for several hundred feet from the stream, the result being, in every instance, a gradual fall of the land from the banks of the creek for a short distance and flat, swampy land beyond, with but few large trees, the black palm, peculiar to the swamps, prevailing everywhere. The general direction of our course was such as to have intercepted the cross-section for the dam—started by Mr. Peary—if continued. Soon after our return to camp Mr. Peary came in with the information that the hill under consideration was surrounded by land, generally below high-water mark. Shortly after Mr. Chambers also returned. He had gone about ten miles up the Sarapiqui without discovering any indications of high land on either side.

It had been established beyond a doubt in our minds that to raise the water of the San Juan by a dam at that point was impossible, and that any further explorations at that place would be useless. I concluded, therefore, to move camp as soon as practicable to the mouth of the river San Francisco, and from there start an instrumental reconnaissance along the valley of that stream and in the direction of Greytown. The next day, the 25th of January, being Sunday, and as I perceived the necessity of appointing an agent at Greytown, to whom I could apply from time to time for men or supplies as might be needed, and of settling some pending accounts, and enlisting a few more men for the extensive survey about to be commenced far from lines of communication, I left at 6 a. m. with Messrs. Peary and Chambers for Greytown on the small river steamer Mariposa, of the Lake and River Navigation Company, leaving Dr. Bransford in charge of the camp, with instructions to the effect that in case I should fail to return by Monday morning he was to proceed with nine men in two canoes to the mouth of the river San Francisco and there select a suitable place for the new camp, clear the ground preparatory to setting up the tents and sheds, and return to Camp Cardenas before night.

We reached Greytown at 1.30 p. m. I proceeded immediately to the office of F. A. Pellas & Co. on business connected with the survey. Mr. Peary started to reconnoiter the town and harbor, and Mr. Chambers made good use of the photographic apparatus, taking views of many places of interest both in the town and harbor. Having settled the pending accounts with F. A. Pellas, who kindly consented to act as agent for the party, and engaged another canoe, four men as macheteros, and a cook, we left Greytown early the next day on the same steamer, Mariposa, for the Sarapiqui. The low water in the river and the defective machinery of the boat made our trip up the river vexatious in the extreme. After continuous traveling for nearly 24 hours, we reached the Sarapiqui, 31 miles from Greytown, at 6 a. m. of the 27th, the rate of speed being a little over one mile per hour. The tired crew of the steamer was allowed a few hours' rest while the stores and camp equipage were being put on board by the other men, and at 11.20 a. m. the whole party, distributed in the little craft and the three canoes, started for the new camp. The progress made up stream was not an improvement on that of the trip from Greytown, and it was already 6.30 in the evening when we reached the new camp. The tents were put up at once, and by 8 p. m. all hands were comfortably located for the night. Next morning the stores were landed and the Mariposa returned to the Nicaragua Mail Steamship Navigation Company. At 11 a. m. Mr. Peary started the transit line from a point on the bank of the San Juan located by the expedition of 1872–'73, and succeeded in running 2,700 feet on the right bank of the river San Francisco. Above this point the stream makes a decided turn to the northwest, and as the object of this survey was only to locate the divide between the valleys of the San Francisco and San Juanillo with reference to the old survey, and to transfer the level from a well known bench on the bank of the San Juan to that point, it was thought best to cross the line to the left bank, and to run more to the easterly in the direction of Greytown. The level was not run on that day, Mr. Chambers being engaged in straightening up matters in camp. Game seemed to be rather abundant in the vicinity, as the doctor had killed in the morning, but a short distance from camp, three turkeys and a mountain hen.

At 7 a. m. on the 29th, both the transit and level parties were in the field, Mr. Peary at the head of the line with the transit, and Mr. Chambers following close with the level. Dr. Bransford had kindly volunteered to instruct the chainman in marking the stakes and keeping the notes, while I was moving from one party to the other, as circumstances required. The ground gone over was alternately swampy and hilly, and covered (as is invariably the case in those tropical countries) with a dense vegetation, through which every foot of the trail had to be cut with the machetes, a slow and tiresome operation, for which the native laborer is especially fitted. But in spite of these difficulties a fair progress was made, and when work was stopped at 5 p. m., the transit had advanced about a mile beyond the starting point in the morning, and the level had covered 5,728 feet, which may be regarded as a good day's work under the conditions. All hands had by that time become acquainted with their various duties, and from that day on, the work being carried forward without friction, many minor details of the every day routine may, for the sake of conciseness, be hereafter omitted.

The transit line was pushed forward by daily advances of from 3,000 to 6,500 feet, but the general northeasterly direction we had started with, leading toward where the best pass through the divide was supposed to exist, could not be maintained without much delay, on account of the very high and steep spurs projecting from the main range constantly blocking our way. To run a transit and level-line over such a succession of high hills is necessarily a slow and tiresome operation, and one subject to errors through the many instrumental stations required.

It was thought more expedient to avoid the high land as much as possible by deflecting the line around the bases of the highest spurs; the distance traversed was thus considerably increased, and the work carried to the wet swamps, where traveling was fatiguing in the extreme, officers and men being compelled in many instances to go over long distances buried to the waist in mud and water, with a very uncertain bottom to stand upon. However, the cutting was lighter than on firm land, the instrumental stations less frequent, and the work could be advanced more rapidly. While the work was being thus carried on, I made daily explorations of all the main branches of the river San Francisco and the many tributaries contained in the basin, and especially those coming from the east.

In these reconnaissances I was generally accompanied by Dr. Bransford, who was always anxious and willing to co-operate with his services even beyond his professional duties. He made it a rule to always carry the shotgun with him, and in this way contributed greatly to the comfort and health of the party by obtaining an abundant supply of excellent game. In returning to camp on the evening of January 30, after an extensive examination of one of the tributaries of the San Francisco, named later Caño de los Chancos, the doctor had succeeded in packing the canoe with five turkeys, four wild pigs, and several pounds of fresh fish. It is needless to say that on this, as well as in many other similar occasions, he met with a hearty reception in camp, where the canned meats were already becoming rather unpopular.

About three miles above the San Juan, the river San Francisco divides into two branches; the main stream takes in its sinuous course a generally northwesterly direction through a broad and comparatively level valley, confined by two ranges of hills of variable elevation, with projecting spurs expanding and contracting the valley, which at no place is less than 1,500 feet wide, while the average is about a mile between the hills. The river, or, more properly, the creek, runs about the center of the valley, the elevation of which is about 60 feet above the sea. It has a mean width of about 50 feet between its clay banks, and a flow in the dry season of not more than 100 cubic feet per second. The other branch, or tributary, named by us "Caño de los Chanchos," runs in a remarkably sinuous course in an easterly direction, through a wide level valley, thickly covered with heavy timber, for a distance of about four miles from the main stream. Two and a half miles above the confluence with the San Francisco, it receives another small creek coming from the left bank, and one and a half miles further on it divides itself again into two water-courses of about equal size, one descending from the north and the other from the east. To the first tributary we gave the name of "Cañito Limpio;" to the second one approaching from the east, "Arroyo de las Cascadas;" the other branch retaining the name of "Caño de los Chanchos." It may be proper to say here that the term "caño," as here used, is intended to mean a small stream or creek, the application given in Nicaragua, and is by no means the same as "cañon" or "canyon" as applied in the Western Territories to a deep gorge or ravine, between high and steep banks, worn by water-courses.

The examination of these streams showed very favorable indications for the location of the canal, both on account of their direction and the features of their valleys. Cañito Limpio and the Arroyo are separated only by a small triangular-shaped tract of rolling country, their headwaters coming almost in close contact near the summit of the dividing ridge. The valley of the Cañito is, however, more in a direct course to Greytown, and it was decided to first run the transit and level lines up that stream, and when the actual level and location of its headwaters were accurately ascertained, we would be better able to compare with other depressions leading to the passes and to the basin of the San Juanillo River.

On the evening of the 3d of February the survey had reached the banks of the Cañito. The work was already too far from Camp Chandler, on the bank of the San Juan, requiring two and one-half hours of fast and fatiguing walk, by the trail, over hills and through swamps, in going to and from the head of the line. It was evident that the operation of moving camp in advance of the present end of our work was going to be a serious and difficult undertaking, demanding much time and arduous labor to transport the stores and camp equipage on men's shoulders, over our long and rough trail, and involving much loss of our limited time, and extraordinary efforts, which could only end in the complete exhaustion of our small force, and probably much sickness. The transportation by water was partially free for about three miles, the balance of the distance, up the Chanchos and Cañito, being much obstructed by low water and numerous fallen trees and drifted logs, which would have to be removed, or the loaded canoes pulled or lifted bodily over them. This method seemed to present less serious objections than the former, and it was finally adopted. Immediately upon our return to camp that evening, Mr. Chambers commenced the packing of two weeks' provisions, and preparing for transportation such other camp equipage as might be forwarded at once, so as to make a load of not more than 800 pounds for each of our three canoes. Mr. Peary was ordered to start early next morning with three picked men in each canoe, provided with axes, machettes, paddles, and poles, and to push his way as rapidly as possible up the San Francisco, Chanchos, and Cañito, and to establish camp on the banks of the latter stream as far in advance of the then present terminus of our line as practicable. The work of assorting and packing the provisions so as to be properly protected from water was not completed until late that night. Early next morning the miniature fleet left Camp Chandler in a driving rain, every one fully appreciating the privations and hard work in store for them, but not the less cheerful and determined to do their full duty nevertheless. It took Mr. Peary and his small but faithful party of natives three days of constant hard work to reach the point of destination, and one day to return to Camp Chandler with the canoes. During those four days that officer and his men were constantly working in the water, removing logs, pulling the canoes over mud banks and floundering through deep pools from one obstruction to another, or lifting them bodily over logs too large to be cut by the axe; resting only at night on the banks of the streams, with green palm leaves for a bed, and rubber blankets as their only protection. While fully appreciating all the difficulties of the undertaking, I had underestimated the time required for the trip, and after the second day I commenced to feel quite anxious about Mr. Peary's return; not that I feared the delay to be due to any serious accident, but simply on account of the time consumed in that manner while there yet remained so much to be done. His delay I could only explain by the fact that he had encountered more serious obstacles than had been anticipated, and having been ordered to accomplish a certain object, I knew him too well to entertain even the most distant idea that he would return leaving it undone. He with his party returned on the evening of the 7th, and the next day being Sunday, it was thought best to give the men a day of much needed rest; and that was the last Sunday the party spent in camp during the prosecution of the survey. After that day the men were allowed extra compensation for holidays, and the work went on continuously to the end.

Having stored the provisions on hand and all but the most absolutely essential luggage in the shed built for that special purpose, I left a man in charge of the same, with instructions to obtain and deliver mail, receive stores, &c., from passing steamers; and on the morning of February 9th the whole party started in three canoes, with the tents, light baggage, the instruments, and as much of the provisions as could be carried. The difficulties met with were of a nature similar to those already described, except that, with the way partially cleared by Mr. Peary, a large working force, and the valuable assistance of Mr. Chambers, who, like Mr. Peary, by word and personal exertions encouraged the men to constant action, the trip was made in two days, and at 4 p. m. of the 10th the three canoes had arrived at the new camp. Before night set in all hands were made comfortable; and with a hearty hot dinner, at which four turkeys killed by the doctor and Mr. Peary were much relished, the party turned in for a needed night's rest. The new camp was named after President Cleveland.

Early on the following day the transit and level line was resumed and pushed up the valley of the Cañito until the evening of the 13th, when we reached the foothills of the dividing ridge. At that point the valley of the Cañito divides, one branch rising to the southeastward, the other to the northeast; the latter confined by abrupt steep interlocking spurs, round the bases of which the Cañito twists and turns with all the characteristics of a mountain stream. It was thought advisable to halt there with the transit and level, while a careful reconnaissance could be made of all the depressions leading to and through the divide; and when the most favorable pass had been decided upon and fixed, with reference to our transit line, the work of locating the canal would be resumed. To the south we had a range of high hills extending over a large area as far as the San Juan River, and connecting to the southeast with the San Juanillo hills, several hundred feet high. Our only chance for success was therefore to the north and northeast, and our investigations were directed there. With the view of getting some idea of the topography of the surrounding country, to guide us in the proposed explorations—that region being uninhabited and entirely unknown, even to the natives engaged in rubber hunting—Mr. Peary ascended a high tree on the top of a hill back of Camp Cleveland, and from this elevation obtained a good idea of the topography of the country to the northwest, north, and northeast; his view to the east and southeast being obscured by neighboring high trees. To the north-northeast he perceived a marked depression in the hills inclosing the San Francisco basin, and on the morning of the 14th he left camp with three men to run a line of reconnaissance N. 26° E. in the direction of this depression.

In 6,300 feet he came to a stream flowing west, supposed at the time to be the Chanchos, his line cutting this stream just below a waterfall about 30 feet high, which was afterwards named, at his suggestion, "Saltos de Elvira."

In the meantime Mr. Chambers was pushing the level up to the end of the Limpio line, and Dr. Bransford and myself, starting in a northeast direction from the last station of that line, in about 3,000 feet came to a stream running over a rocky bed, with considerable descent, in a north by west course.

The next five days were devoted to a rapid yet systematic and thorough reconnaissance of the entire eastern portion of the water-basin of the San Francisco and the streams descending into it, from and including the Arroya de las Cascadas, to a distance of over three miles to the north.

To accomplish this Mr. Peary ran a compass line northerly and northeasterly along the western slopes of the hills, cutting all the streams. From this line as a base he then ascended each stream to its source, camping in the hills with one machetero while engaged in this duty, and making excursions over the "divide" wherever there seemed favorable indications. A description of one of these streams will serve for all, viz: Smooth, rocky bed; gradual ascent for some distance; abrupt climb over a steep rock scarp with its talus of ragged boulders; sluggish flow for some distance above this point; the bed full of angular fragments of black trap; disappearance of the water; and, finally, a sudden rise of the dry bed to the summit at an elevation varying from 350 to 500 feet above sea-level. At the same time Mr. Chambers was following the streams below the compass line to their confluences with each other and the Chauchos, until at last the devious tangled threads were all united and gathered into the San Francisco.

The information obtained in these five days showed that the depression seen from Camp Cleveland opened into the valley of a northerly-trending stream, and if there was any pass to the eastward from that valley it was situated so far to the north as to render a long detour necessary to utilize it in the location of the canal. I therefore considered the entire region north of the Arroya de las Cascadas as eliminated from further consideration, and as all indications pointed unmistakably to the valley of the Arroya as offering the most encouraging prospects for the desired location, I again dispatched Mr. Peary to the "divide" early on the 20th, with four men and provisions for five days, to explore the region to the eastward and southeastward of his previous work.

On the same day Mr. Chambers made a reconnaissance of the valley of the Chauchos by running about a mile northwest from the confluence of the Limpio, in order to ascertain the character of the country and the difficulties likely to be met in building the canal on a line north of that stream and on a straight line directly from the valley of the San Francisco to the divide. He found the country generally level, with occasional undulations, and isolated hills not more than 25 to 40 feet high. By climbing a high tree at the summit of one of these elevations, he succeeded in obtaining a fair commanding view of the high ranges surrounding the valley, of which he made a careful sketch. This method of obtaining information as to the topography was taken advantage of whenever practicable, and it saved much labor and contributed in a great measure to the favorable results accomplished by the party. In making an extensive and detailed topographical survey of that region, where the engineer can only ascertain what lies 10 feet ahead of him by cutting his way through the dense vegetation, the construction of towers of observation on several prominent points, and perhaps reconnaissances by balloon, would be the means of obtaining readily, and at comparatively small expense, information which would require, by the system we were compelled to adopt for want of other means, many months of arduous labor.

A painful indisposition had kept me in camp for the past four days, but I was now able to go about, and on the 21st we moved our camp to the banks of the Chauchos, opposite the branch of the Cañito. We had already commenced to feel the difficulty of obtaining our supply of provisions from the depot at Camp Chandler, on the banks of the San Juan; the water was daily growing lower in the creeks, and places where the canoes had passed, either over or under large logs a few days before, were now entirely blocked up; consequently the loads had to be reduced and a longer time allowed for a trip.

Our small force of macheteros had been somewhat lessened of late on account of sore feet and bruised limbs, and the detail of three of our best men to handle the canoes in the transportation of provisions was an additional task which affected very seriously the efficiency of the party for work. In anticipation of this drawback, I had sent to Greytown for four men, and this much-needed reinforcement, and a load of the most-needed articles of food, were received at Camp Morgan on the evening of the 21st. The camp had been so named in consideration of the interest manifested by the honorable Senator from Alabama in the canal question.

On the morning of the 22d we started the transit line from the right bank of the Cañito Limpio, up the valley of the Chauchos, over generally level country, with small sections of swamp, Mr. Chambers at the instrument, the doctor regarding my condition as unfit yet for active field-work.

About 10 a. m. on the 24th, while on the line, I met Mr. Peary returning from his exploring expedition to the eastern slope of the divide. He reported that after three days spent in a thorough and extended examination of the divide, and all the streams descending its easterly slopes, he had the previous day gone from a small tributary of the Arroya de las Cascadas, over the divide, which he crossed at an elevation of about 280 feet, into the valley of a stream descending over a precipitous rocky bed, in a southeasterly and then easterly direction; had followed this stream for several miles beyond the summit, reaching a point at which his aneroid gave a reading of only 25 feet above sea-level, and had satisfied himself that the valley of this stream was the only one presenting any favorable features for the location of the canal.

It has been thought proper to refer here somewhat in detail to all the work done in exploring the dividing ridge, so as to show that the selection of the pass and the location of the canal line was not decided upon in haste, but was the result of a thorough investigation and mature consideration of all the facts connected therewith. This information was mainly obtained through the untiring energy, skill, and devotion to duty of Civil Engineer Peary, who, under the discomforts and hardships endured through many rainy days in the field, and many nights with only a few palm leaves for shelter, and a rubber blanket thrown over a pile of leaves for a bed, and scanty rations, never flinched while there was work to be done. The accompanying skeleton sketch shows the different lines run in that region before the location of the line was finally decided upon.

On the 25th the location of the line was continued from the confluence of the Chauchos and the Arroya, up the valley of the latter, to the Saltos de Elvira; Mr. Peary in charge of the location and Mr. Chambers following closely with the level. While at Camp Cleveland, on the 12th of February, I received a personal note from President Cardenas, of Nicaragua, requesting me to proceed to Managua as soon as possible to confer with him on canal matters. It was my duty, according to my instructions, to comply with that request without delay, but while waiting for the river steamer due at San Francisco on the 19th on her way up, I was taken painfully ill, and had to postpone my departure for the next trip, on the 26th.

The survey would soon be carried across the divide and down the eastern slope toward Greytown, and the difficulties of providing the party with provisions from the station on the river San Juan would necessarily grow more serious as the work advanced. This could only result in an uncertain and probably insufficient supply of food, and in an unsatisfactory progress of the work, through the diversion of a number of the best men for that duty. Mr. Peary had followed the eastern stream, which had been named the Deseado, to the head of canoe navigation; and it was regarded as a matter of the utmost importance, under the circumstances, to open communication with Greytown, whence men and stores could then be easily obtained. This had to be done by water, and I felt confident, from my knowledge of the valley of the San Juanillo, and of the lagoons east of Greytown, that the Deseado emptied into Benard's lagoon, which was of easy access by the San Juanillo—this stream being navigable by canoe at all stages of water from Greytown. Dr. Bransford, always anxious to contribute to the success of the party, volunteered to attempt the opening of that much-needed water-way, and his services were readily accepted. It was decided, therefore, that he should leave with me on the following day and try to reach Greytown as rapidly as possible. In that place he was to engage a guide, canoes, and men, and with a fair amount of provisions proceed up the Deseado and meet the party. This was thought less uncertain, from the fact that Mr. Peary had discovered on the banks of the stream several huts, recently abandoned by rubber hunters, evidently from Greytown; and it might be supposed that some of these men could be easily found in that small settlement who would be willing to give information or act as guide, for a compensation.

Leaving Mr. Peary in charge of the survey, and Mr. Chambers of the camp organization and provisions—while assisting in the work of location—I left Camp Morgan, with Dr. Bransford, on the 26th of February, for the landing at Camp Chandler; the steamer for the interior being due either that evening or the following day. But after anxiously waiting for three days, with no news from the steamer, we left in our canoe for the junction of the Colorado, where the steamer was supposed to be moored. Coming on board at 8 p. m. we were told that she had been delayed waiting for some freight, but would start next day on her trip up the river. The expected cargo having arrived on the afternoon of the 2d of March, the doctor left for Greytown with letters for our agent there, and for the governor of the town, requesting their assistance in the discharge of his mission, and soon after I left on the steamer on my way (as I expected) for Managua. The canoe had been returned to Camp Morgan with a full load of much-needed provisions.

I arrived at Castillo Rapids at noon of the 4th, to find that the steamer for Granada had left the day before, and that the next trip would be made on the 14th. As my instructions required me to leave Nicaragua for the United States not later than April 1, it was evident that I could not, at that late date, go to Managua, then return to Greytown, close the accounts of the expedition, then come up the river, join the party, and proceed to Corinto in time to take the mail steamer of April 8 for Panama.

I had applied for an extension of time, but had not as yet received an answer to my request. I wrote to President Cardenas, from Castillo, explaining my inability to respond to his call, and sent to Granada a cablegram to be forwarded to the Department, repeating my request for an extension of time during April. I thought that the best course for me to pursue under the circumstances would be to go direct to Greytown, settle our accounts, and if the doctor had succeeded in communicating with the surveying party (as I felt confident he would do), to join them and make arrangements for our departure for home according to circumstances. However, fearing that a connection might fail in that direction, I ordered Messrs. Peary and Chambers that, unless otherwise directed, they should stop the work of survey in time to be at Camp Chandler with the party, on the 29th of March, to meet me on my way from Greytown. It was my intention at that time to make certain surveys in the vicinity of the forks of the San Carlos and San Juan for a dam across the latter river, before taking final leave for home on the steamer of the 27th at San Carlos, and which would reach Granada on the 1st of April.

I left Castillo on the 5th and reached Greytown on the night of the 6th of March. To my great disappointment I was informed that Dr. Bransford had left on the morning of that day for the Rio Indio, as I had been hoping to arrive there in time to meet and join him on his trip. The next day I received a note left by him, stating the particulars of his arrangements for a trip into the Rio Indio Lagoons in search of the party. He said to have secured a very good guide, but while not familar with those lagoons—which I understood to be connected with Benard's Lagoons—I felt some apprehension for the result, as I firmly believed the quickest way to reach the Deseado was by way of the San Juanillo and Laguna Benard. The mouth of the Rio Indio is seven miles to the northwest of Greytown, and has been suggested as a more favorable location for the Atlantic terminus of the canal than the latter harbor; and taking advantage of the opportunity now offered, and in my anxiety to get some news from the doctor, I concluded to visit the place and ascend the river sufficiently to get a fair idea of its conditions. Leaving on the morning of the 9th of March with General Isidro Urtecho, governor of Greytown, and the United States consul, Mr. William A. Brown, Mr. H. F. Bringham, the English consul, and other gentlemen; I proceeded to the mouth of Rio Indio, making a careful inspection of the coast on the way, and, after carefully examining the locality, went several miles up the stream in a canoe, taking soundings both going and returning. The river runs for several miles nearly parallel to the coast, in a northwesterly and southeasterly course, emptying into the sea with the last direction, that being the line of least resistance as it flows into the trough of the waves. The bar is subject to frequent changes, due to the powerful forces of the seas on the one hand and the flow of the river on the other, struggling for supremacy over the sandy beach and banks at the outlet. Large portions of these banks are at times scoured out by the river into the sea, only to be returned by the latter as soon as the river current subsides. At the time of my visit the entrance was practically closed and the sea was building up the coast at a rapid rate. The river has an average width of 600 feet between the banks for about 6 miles, the current sluggish, the waters clear and from 16 to 18 feet deep close to the banks. The surrounding country is flat and generally swampy and covered with palms and large trees. A layer of about eight inches of rich soil overlies the whole area, and below that sand seems to be found to a great depth. I was not favorably impressed with the locality as a terminus for the canal in preference to Greytown. A harbor would have to be constructed at either place, and Greytown is the least exposed location, and in its present condition offers greater facilities for the work and more economical approaches for the canal. I was much disappointed in failing to get any information as to Dr. Bransford, except that he had left on the 6th, with three men, in a rather dilapidated canoe, bound up the river.

The next three days were passed in Greytown, going over our accounts with the agents, F. A. Pellas & Co., and making a careful examination of the harbor, with a view to determining what alterations. if any, had taken place since my last visit in 1880. I found no marked change in the conditions of the outer bar or in the sand-bank blocking up the entrance, except that the curve of deep water seemed to have receded some distance from the beach. The map of the harbor, recently made by order of the Government of Nicaragua (a copy of which is submitted with this report), does not show, however, any shoaling in that direction. The filling up of the inner bay (practically a lagoon) is quite apparent, water-grass now growing luxuriantly at places where a depth of from 12 to 18 feet could be obtained five years before. It may be said, however, that this grass commences to thrive at a depth of 10 or more feet where the current is not strong enough to disturb the roots projecting to the bottom.

The doctor returned on the evening of the 12th much depressed by disappointment, the continued exposure, privations, and hardships of the last six days, and with a very sore toe from the bite of a chigoe (nigua), a small insect, which, penetrating the flesh, deposits its eggs in a sack, and when not properly treated is often the cause of painful inflammation, but is rarely followed by serious consequences. The doctor had not succeeded in communicating with the party, the guide having misled him into the tributaries of the Indian River, too far to the north and west of our line of survey. The information he obtained, as to the condition of the river and its tributaries, is very interesting in connection with the canal problem, and worth the effort and expense attending his trip, but his failure in accomplishing the object of his mission was the cause of much annoyance and disapointment. Had he not met me in Greytown on his return, he would have started at once for Benard's Lagoon, where his pretended guide should have taken him in the first instance; but the steamer was to leave on her up trip inside of four days, our time was limited, and even granting that connection could be made with the party in that short time, but little would have been gained thereby at that late date, as the work had to be stopped and all hands return to headquarters at Camp Chandler by the 19th, preparatory to leaving for home.

We left Greytown on the evening of the 17th. The low water in the lower river had for some time cut off the navigation by steamers, below the forks of the Colorado, and it was only after twenty hours of constant hard work, by passengers and crew, that we were able to get over that short distance in a light canoe, and boarding the steamer on the afternoon of the following day she soon started on her upward trip, reaching our camp at San Francisco on the morning of the 19th. Here I met the whole party; all well and cheerful, but showing by their ragged looks unmistakable signs of the hardships they had passed through. After I left the party, Mr. Peary had continued the transit line, his progress, however, being much retarded during the first ten days on account of insufficient force and the reconnaissances necessary to keep the line in the most favorable location, through the broken and densely wooded spurs, and to satisfy himself beyond a doubt that the line was following the lowest and most economical route over the divide; but the location was prosecuted, in spite of the many privations, hardships, and copious rains, until the 16th of March, when work was suspended and the party returned to Camp Chandler, which was reached on the evening of the 18th, the line having been advanced over the divide and down the valley of the Deseado to station 278, a short distance below Peary's farthest of February 23.

The level gave the water in the Deseado, near this station, as 29.56 feet above the sea. Mr. Peary had also, in an attempt to open communication with Dr. Bransford, decended the Deseado, reaching on March 12 a point within some eight miles of Greytown, but was unable to go further for lack of time.

A general glance at the features of the route followed by the transit line during this time, and of the region traversed by Mr. Peary in his reconnaissances beyond station 278, will not be out of place here, and will assist the reader to better follow the references and the detailed description of the canal location in the succeeding section of this report.

Leaving the Chanchos line, near the junction of the Arroya and Chanchos, the "divide" line passes up the broad level valley of the Arroya in a nearly due east direction to the Saltos de Elvira, thence along the upper valley (a counterpart of the lower), still in an easterly direction, to the Groaning Tree Fork. Here the Arroya divides into two equal branches; one climbing the high hills to the north, the other rising in a generally easterly direction to the "divide." The line follows the valley of the latter, which rises gradually, confined by hills of moderate elevation, sufficiently wide apart at their bases to leave ample room for the canal to the "divide," a small nearly level plain about half a mile across, hemmed in by high hills to the north and south, while to the west and southwest the Arroya and Limpio glide away to the San Francisco; and to the east the Deseado, forcing its way through a narrow gorge, falls an almost continuous cataract to the basin of the San Juanillo. Crossing this diminutive plateau in a due east direction, the line enters the valley of the Deseado, and follows closely the course of that stream, as it descends rapidly in a rocky bed between opposing spurs and over abrupt ledges, in a general southeast direction, until within the distance of a mile it has dropped some 210 feet.

Not far below this point the Deseado takes a tributary from the southeast equal in size to itself, and thence flows in a generally east-northeast direction, through a comparatively broad, gently sloping valley, to station 276, where it is 29.56 feet above the sea-level. Here, freeing itself entirely from the crowding hills, the stream rounds the extremity of the precipitous range, which has been confining it on the north, and stretches away to the northeast, in sinuous contortions, for a distance of a little over two miles, as the crow flies. At this point it receives another tributary about half the size of itself, from the north, and a short distance further on rounds a high hill to the south and resumes an almost due east-northeast direction toward the San Juanillo, which direction it retains until within about a mile of the above-mentioned stream; there, doubling the southern extremity of a low ridge, coming from the north, it stretches away northerly to Laguna Benard, and thence into the San Juanillo.

The valley of this eastern stream may be thus divided into four distinct sections between the point where the line first cuts it and the end of Mr. Peary's reconnaissance, near which point, as will be seen further on, the line of the canal leaves it to intersect the San Juanillo. First, the little plain at the "divide," forming the upper valley through which it flows, in long doubling bends, between perpendicular banks cut in the soft soil, 4 to 8 feet deep, a sluggish stream 10 to 15 feet with scarcely perceptible current. Just at the eastern edge of this plain it takes in a considerable water-course draining the hills to the north, and just below this point it makes a peculiar loop around a projecting spur, and enters the second or cataract section. Here, for a distance of a mile and a half by the line (three-quarters, as the crow flies), the stream turns and twists amongst crowding mountain spurs, in a generally southeasterly course, its bed for the most part solid rock, plunges headlong over several series of beautiful cascades, below which the bed is full of large, rounded masses of rock, growing smaller and smaller until they finally disappear, and the stream enters on the third section. Long, straight reaches, stretching northeasterly; the bed of the stream 60 to 75 feet wide, but shallow; a clear sand, gravel, or cemented gravel bottom, over which the water ripples rapidly; low banks; sand banks; deep pools in the bends; low, flat plains on either side, interrupted occasionally by spurs coming to the banks of the stream. This section extends just about to station 276. Beyond that point to tide-water, at the lagoons, only a careful compass and aneroid examination was made at first, sufficiently accurate, however, for an approximate location of the line through that broad, comparatively level valley; but it will be seen further on that this was later supplemented by an actual location.

The fourth section begins at station 276. Low, isolated hills take the place of the spurs; the valley widens; the stream grows deep and sluggish, doubles and twists on itself; the banks are covered with the dense tangle of vines peculiar to the lowlands; banks of soft mud are now met with; old trees fill the stream, and the water assumes a smoky look; it has nearly reached the sea-level; beyond that point to Greytown the country is a dense palm swamp of mud and water, with several lagoons and open grass patches, but from 1 to 3 feet above sea-level.

Upon meeting the party at the San Francisco on the 19th, Mr. Peary suggested to be allowed to return to the "divide" with three men, in order to obtain more precise information as to the topography of the country adjacent to the line, by means of off-sets from the main transit line. To this I readily consented, provided he would return in time to take the steamer of the 27th, and join the party at San Carlos. He started back to the divide on the same day, and I took the balance of the party on the steamer to the mouth of the San Carlos, where we established our camp. It was my intention now to take a number of cross-sections of the river San Juan, both above and below the San Carlos, with a view of finding the most favorable location for a dam across that river; and in case I should receive authority to continue the survey during the month of April, as I had requested, I would be better prepared to commence the location of a direct line from the site of the dam to and through the valley of the San Francisco, connecting with our new location in the valley of the Chanchos. I expected in this way to further reduce the line of previous surveys and dispense with some objectionable sharp curves. At any rate, should my request be denied, I would have secured additional information on one of the most important problems connected with the construction of the canal.

The following day we commenced the survey on the right bank of the San Juan, above the San Carlos, for the purpose of locating two opposite high hills on either side, and thus be better able to get the shortest line connecting the desired elevations by the crest of the dam, at the abutments.

By noon of the 23d we had fixed the position of the dam at that point, between two rocky hills, admirably located for the purpose, and were about to run the final profile on its axis, when, to our great disappointment, it was found, contrary to my expectations, that the depth of water on that line varied from 10 feet close to the bank to 60 feet or more in the middle of the stream. To construct, at that depth, foundations for a dam intended to raise the water about 50 feet, across such a mighty river, could be regarded only as impracticable. The proposed location had, therefore, to be abandoned, not without deep regrets, both on account of the valuable time consumed and because of the good features it possessed in every other respect. I had been misled by the sounding on the chart of the river in our possession, not on account of incorrect platting, but, as was determined afterwards, by an error in reading small figures written in too close proximity. But the bad effect of this disappointment was soon dispelled by the arrival of the mail from Granada, bringing the anxiously-awaited authority to continue the work, and received just in time to prevent my discharging the force of laborers, breaking up the organization, and starting up the river.

On the evening of that day Mr. Chambers and myself made an official call on the commandant of Costa Rica, at the mouth of the river San Carlos, Don Juan Bart, who had arrived that morning from the interior; and learning that we were surveying in the vicinity, went immediately to meet us on the line and offer his services. He informed me of having received instructions from his Government directing him to render me any assistance in his power, which he seemed anxious to do. This gentleman very kindly rendered us valuable assistance on several occasions, both by giving information as to the topography of the country, especially in the valley of the river San Carlos, with which he and his men were familiar, and with his boats and men in moving our camp down the river.

The next three days were spent in looking for a good site for a dam below the junction of the river San Carlos. We succeeded in finding an excellent location just above the bend at Ochoa, between two opposite steep and rocky hills. The river here is 1,133 feet wide, and the average depth 6.6 feet, with a maximum depth of 17 feet at the base of the rocky abutment on the right bank.

Careful examinations were made in different directions to satisfy ourselves that these hills were spurs of ranges extending to the mountains in the interior, and those on the right bank were followed westward to the river San Carlos. The location of the dam below this river might be regarded as involving the necessity of diverting its waters into the San Juan below the dam, and it was my desire to ascertain the practicability of building an embankment across the San Carlos for the purpose of excluding its waters from the San Juan before the problem of the dam was definitely settled. A survey was made, therefore, connecting the extremity of the range extending from the right abutment of the dam at Ochoa to the right bank of the San Carlos, a short distance above its mouth, with another elevation on the left bank (and the profile is submitted with this report), not that I think that such an embankment and the diversion of the water of the San Carlos are at all essential elements in the construction of the canal, but simply to furnish data for calculation to those who may entertain different views on that subject. A dam 52 feet high at Ochoa will convert the upper valley of the San Juan and that of the San Carlos into an extension of Lake Nicaragua, and the latter river, which in its present condition cannot be navigated in the dry season for want of water to float even a canoe, and in the rainy season on account of its torrential current, will be turned into an extensive, deep inlet, overflowing the bottom lands of the valley, a portion of the canal itself, penetrating for many miles into the interior of the territory of Costa Rica, where thousands of square miles of land, at present inaccessible by land or water, will become the richest portion of the territory of that Republic. The sediment now being carried down by the swift current of the river will then be deposited, for want of transporting power, at the outlets of the ravines and mountain torrents emptying into the basin, or in the recesses of the valley, where it can do no harm. In fact, the area scoured will be so much reduced that but little material will be removed. It may be seen by an inspection of the plans and profile that both the embankment and artificial channel are perfectly feasible, but I regard them as unnecessary, and no estimate of cost for their construction will be submitted with this report.

The 27th and 28th were advantageously spent in cross-sectioning, triangulating, and running several lines for the final location of the dam and the topography of the adjacent country.

Upon returning to camp on the evening of the 28th, I was met by Mr. Peary, who had arrived with his small party during the day, all in good health. He reported to have taken 46 cross-sections between stations 118 and 278, across the divide, amounting in the aggregate to 12.3 miles of trail-cut, measured, and leveled with the aneroid, and to have sketched the topography of a large area of country on both sides of this line. This information was a valuable addition toward a more accurate location of that portion of the line, and in the computations of excavation and disposition of the material to be removed. He was ordered to get ready to leave for Greytown by the down steamer of the 3d, and on his arrival there to engage a canoe, and with a small force of men proceed to a well-known point on the river San Juanillo, from which he was to run a line of levels connecting that point with station 276 in the valley of the river Deseado, and thus to complete the instrumental location of the line from the valley of the San Francisco to tide-water. From that point on the San Juanillo to Greytown the country is perfectly flat, but little above sea-level, and well known from previous surveys.

On the 29th we left Camp Ammen, at the mouth of the San Carlos, and moved to the Ochoa, just below the selected site for the dam, where we found a beautiful and healthy location for a camp on the right bank of the river, from which our work could be advantageously carried on for several days. This was called Camp Bayard.

The location of the line from above the dam to the valley of the San Francisco was commenced on the morning of the 30th of March. Just above the site of the dam is a deep, broad valley, confined by the range ending at the left abutment, and another one running down to the bank of the river about 2,000 feet up-stream. Into that basin empties a ravine draining another narrow valley penetrating easterly about 3,500 feet into the range, the southern extremity of which forms the left abutment for the dam. These two valleys afford a most desirable harbor at the entrance of the canal, free from the influence of the river current, and a saving of about half a mile of canal excavation. The line was carried along the axis of the eastern valley to its upper extremity where the hills again meet and join the mountains extending to the interior. From that point forward the line runs for a distance of 2 miles over a broken country of moderate elevation, with occasional high peaks, which we were careful to avoid in the location. On the morning of the 4th of April, about 2.5 miles from the dam, we came to a deep ravine to the left of the line with clear running water, which I took to be the headwaters of the river San Francisco. The mosquitoes and yellow flies were at that time annoying in the extreme, which led us to believe that an extensive swamp must lie to the north and east of us, from which these insects were blown in our direction by the prevailing strong northeast winds.

By the evening of the 6th the work had advanced 4 miles, and we were running over a swampy ground, with occasional low hills, confined by high ranges to the north and south. The daily morning and evening tramps to and from the end of the line, over a roughly-cut trail, through deep swamps, up and down steep hills, and climbing over logs and fallen trees, were getting to make serious inroads on our valuable time and on the strength of the party, particularly so on myself, my physical condition at the time being less able to stand the exertion. Mr. Chambers, with uniform kindness, tried to relieve me of the hardest portion of the work, by running either the transit or the level, as circumstances required, over the most difficult portion of the line; but there was work enough for both of us, and I decided to move camp to a more advanced position, from which the work could be carried on to a greater advantage. Mr. Chambers was therefore directed to proceed to the end of the line, with four men and provisions for two days, and from there to cut a light trail in the direction the line was being located, until he met the river San Francisco, supposed to be about 3 miles from end of line. It was my purpose to ascend that river as far as practicable; establish camp on the banks of the stream, and resume the work from that side, with the decided advantage that the end of the line would be for some time approaching instead of running from us. Mr. Chambers met with many serious difficulties on his way, having to cross several deep, muddy swamps, and wade many deep pools of stagnant waters, but he went through all with his usual determination. He had left the end of the line on the morning of the 8th, and about noon had met the river San Francisco just about where we had approximately located it on the chart, and after making a careful examination of the stream returned to his camp late in the afternoon, too tired to continue to Camp Bayard the same day. I had been carrying the level forward, and on my way to camp received a note from him, reporting the success of his exploration, and that the San Francisco could be ascended to the end of his trail, with about the same difficulties we had met in going up the Chanchos, to which stream the San Francisco had a striking resemblance at that point. I concluded to move camp as soon as practicable after the return of Mr. Chambers and his men.. He arrived in camp next morning, and immediately commenced to perfect the necessary preparations for an early start on the 10th.

Our supply of provisions being considerably reduced by that time, and the camp equipage brought down to a minimum by dispensing with all articles not regarded as absolutely essential, our three canoes, heavily laden, were sufficient to move in one trip everything down the San Juan to Camp Chandler. Here some of the provisions and luggage were stored in the old shed, and with the canoes very much lighter, we left for the arduous journey up the San Francisco. The difficulties and hardships encountered on this occasion were in every respect similar to those met with in moving camp up to the valley of the Limpio, except that the water was now much lower, and in the absence of Mr. Peary (who had gone to the San Juanillo) the heaviest part of the work fell mainly on Mr. Chambers. This officer had not only the immediate supervision of the arduous work of overcoming the obstructions, but he would, in his zeal, jump into the water when serious obstacles were met with, and by his own personal efforts assist in removing the logs blocking up the way, or in lifting the loaded canoes bodily over them. We had left Camp Chandler at 12.30 p. m., and by 6 in the evening had succeeded in traveling about 9 miles by the course of the stream, when we stopped for the night at the extremity of a sharp bend, where a log about 3 feet in diameter projected out of the water, completely blocking up the way from bank to bank. A fire was soon started, and by 8 o'clock all hands had enjoyed a hearty meal of pressed beef, crackers, and hot coffee, and were as comfortably located for the night as the circumstances would permit. An early start was made the next morning by taking the canoes over the log damming the stream at that point. For about 2 miles beyond, the creek was found comparatively free from obstructions, due to the absence of trees on the banks (sacate grass extending for some distance on both sides), and, with the assistance of deep water, that distance was covered in a short time; but logs, snags, and shoals soon closed our way again at every step, and but little progress had been made up to 12 m., when a stop was made for breakfast. I had left the boats about 9 o'clock, and with one machetero and the rodman, Mr. Cole, had followed the sinuous course of the stream in search of Mr. Chambers' trail. I came to it after cutting our way along the bank for about 5 miles, which, in my anxiety, seemed to be not less than 10. Returning by the same trail, I reached the party while breakfast was being prepared, rather tired and with a ravenous appetite, which was soon satisfied with canned beef and crackers. The condition of the stream above that point was, if possible, worse than that we had gone over before, and it would have required at least one more day of hard work to reach the end of Mr. Chambers' trail with the canoes; for while the distance was probably not more than 2 miles by a straight line, the annoying and capricious bends of the stream, by which, after traveling perhaps half a mile, we found ourselves back again but a few feet from the starting point, would perhaps make the course traveled by the canoes not less than three times that distance. I decided, therefore, that inasmuch as the day might be regarded as lost, as far as the actual survey of the line was concerned, to let the canoes be pushed forward as far as possible until about 4.30 p. m., when I would certainly call a halt and establish camp, as we could not well afford to spare any more of our limited time in this unprofitable manner. At the stated time but little progress had been made since the last start at 1 o'clock—probably less than 2 miles—and therefore a desirable place for camp was selected, on a sharp bend of the stream; and on that night we had a hearty, hot dinner, and comfortable beds under a tight canvas roof. The new quarters were named Camp Whitney.

On the following morning, April 12, Mr. Chambers left camp with the rodman and a reduced force of macheteros, four of the best men having been sent to Camp Chandler to bring up some of the provisions left behind. He took his bedding, and provisions for three days, intending to establish camp ahead of the line located from the dam across the San Juan. From there he pushed the line, running the transit or the level, as might be required, until the 15th, when he had brought the work within 3 miles of Camp Whitney. I then took charge of the transit, and he continued to run the level. On the 16th the line reached the banks of the San Francisco, and shortly after crossing the stream, in attempting to keep the general direction (N. 64½° E.)—we had been running from the San Juan leading to the forks of the Arroyo de las Cascadas—we came to a range of hills from 300 to 500 feet high, extending north and south, across our path. For more than 4½ miles we had been running through a broad, flat, swampy valley, with occasional low hills, confined by high ranges extending east and west.

That basin is the headwaters of the river San Francisco, which, making a detour to the north of the line, suddenly turns in a southeasterly direction, and, striking our line in a tortuous course, runs through the axis of a valley, from half a mile to a mile wide, taking in its course the Chanchos, and other smaller tributaries, to its junction with the San Juan.

We were thus compelled to deflect the line and follow the valley of the San Francisco to its confluence with Caño de los Chanchos, and then up the valley of this stream, the characteristics of which closely resemble those of the San Francisco, to the fork of the Arroyo de las Cascadas. This portion of the work was completed at 3.30 p. m. of the 23d of April. It was found, afterward, that Mr. Peary had connected his survey from the San Juanillo with station 276, the end of the line from the "divide," on the evening of the following day.

The next two days were spent at Camp Chandler, settling the accounts and paying off the men, who had for more than three months worked so faithfully, and submitted to hardships and privations which very few men of the same class would have undergone so patiently. They felt, however, as if they had scarcely done their duty; offered their apologies for not having done better; and expressed, with much feeling, their deep regrets on leaving us, and gratitude for the care and kindness shown them.

A more hardy, patient, faithful, and subordinate lot of men of the same class would be difficult to find anywhere, and it was due to these striking qualities that we were able to successfully accomplish our work against so many adverse circumstances. These men left, however, with one great satisfaction, frequently expressed among themselves, that they had learned in those three months more of the topography of that region of their country than had ever been attempted by any of their countrymen.

The instruments and camp equipage had been properly packed, and were now waiting for Mr. Peary's return from Greytown and the river steamer (which had been agreed upon) to come on the 26th to take us up the river. To our great surprise, she made her appearance on the evening before.

But it was her turn now to wait for us (we had on many occasions waited for her), as I was reluctant to leave without Mr. Peary. She laid fast at the landing all day on the 26th, and when night closed I commenced to feel quite anxious, as the captain had expressed his determination to start early next morning. To my great gratification, however, that officer arrived at midnight, and at daylight of the 27th we parted from the region of our continuous labors for more than three months, bound home, and in much better condition of health than when we landed at the mouth of the Sarapiqui.

After leaving Camp Bayard, at Ochoa, on the morning of April 2, with orders to locate the line from the San Juanillo to the end of the line from the divide in the valley of the Deseado, Mr. Peary had arrived at Greytown in the night of the same day, but the 3d being Good Friday, business was entirely suspended, and he was unable to make much progress in getting his outfit and in engaging the men for the work. By 3 o'clock next day, however, he had completed his preparations, and without loss of time left the town with a heavily loaded canoe, five men, and a rodman. Camping that night on the beach at Harbor Head, in order to get an observation of Polaris, in which, however, the clouds disappointed him, he started up the river the next morning and reached the designated point on the San Juanillo late in the afternoon, and immediately built his palm-leaf thatched hut for a shelter, and got ready to commence work early next morning. Starting from camp he cut a trail due west through a wet swamp, and in less than one mile reached the Deseado, just above the end of his reconnaissance of March 12. He followed the stream some distance farther down in a northerly direction, to satisfy himself that it emptied into Benard's Lagoon, and returned to camp to adjust his instruments preparatory to commencing the location of the line. An insufficient force, and the departure of the rodman, who got frightened and had to be sent home, frequent rains, and a swampy country, traversed by numerous small ditches and covered by dense vegetation, with the delays and difficulties in moving and building camps, when everything had to be carried on the men's backs, made this work particularly arduous. However, by untiring energy, this officer succeeded in pushing the work steadily forward, and on the evening of April 24, just eighteen days after establishing his first camp on the San Juanillo, he had connected his line and levels with station 276 of the divide line, a distance of 7.9 miles from the San Juanillo, and had cut 18,300 feet of offsets besides. He arrived at Greytown at 6.30 p. m. of the 25th, obtained a fresh crew, left at midnight for San Francisco, and by keeping his men constantly at work, they having but three hours' rest during the entire trip, reached the main party the following midnight, having covered 39 miles in that time, dragging his canoe bodily over the sand-banks of the almost dry lower San Juan for the first 18 miles, and poling it against a strong current for the remaining 21 miles.

We ascended the river without any incident deserving special mention, arriving at San Carlos, the outlet of the lake, on the afternoon of the 29th. Here we had to wait for the schooner which had taken the place of the lake steamer—at the time undergoing repairs—to take us across the lake to Granada. At San Carlos we were hospitably and kindly received by the commandant of the station, Col. Pedro Rojas, and Don Saturnino Lacayo, the collector of customs at Castillo. Colonel Rojas invited us to share his comfortable quarters, which we thankfully accepted; and Mr. Lacayo informed me he had orders from his Government to contribute with everything in his power toward the work of the survey, and that as I had not yet offered him an opportunity in any way to comply with these instructions, he would regard it as a privilege if I permitted him to pay the bill for the hire of the two canoes I had obtained at that place on the 19th of January, amounting to $70.75, which graceful act of courtesy I could not but grant. I therefore surrendered to him the bills I had already paid, receiving the amount named in return. On the forenoon of the 30th Mr. Chambers, who never lost an opportunity, no matter under what circumstances, to take photographic views of all places of interest, kept himself quite busy with the camera, while Mr. Peary was exploring the surroundings. The schooner arrived at 3 p. m., and started on her return trip at 8 p. m., arriving at Granada on the afternoon of the next day, May 1. As the mail steamer at Panama was due at Corinto on the 8th of that month, I concluded to remain at that place until the 5th, and to expend this time in working out our note-books, making a rough plat of all the work done, which we had no opportunity to do before, and in settling some pending accounts with F. A. Pellas & Co.

We left Granada on the morning of May 5, stopping at Managua a sufficient length of time to pay my respects to his Excellency the President and the United States consul, and continued our trip, arriving at Leon on the night of the same day. Leaving this place on the 8th, we arrived at Corinto on the same day, but the steamer did not come into port until the 11th, leaving on the evening of the 12th, and after stopping for freight at San Juan del Sur, in Nicaragua, and Punta Arenas, in Costa Rica, arrived at Panama on the morning of the 19th.

Dr. Bransford here received orders to the Iroquois, lying in the bay. The steamer for New York was advertised to leave Aspinwall on the 24th, and Mr. Peary, Mr. Chambers, and myself spent the next four days in making a careful examination of the work in progress on the Panama canal, leaving on the evening of May 24, arriving at New York on the 3d of June.

Messrs. Peary and Chambers were ordered to report for duty in preparing the data for this report, and with the assistance of Mr. James Philp, as draughtsman, the office work was actually commenced on the 17th of July.

The foregoing statement shows that the work of the expedition was strictly confined to a relocation of the eastern section of the canal. The western section had been rectified by me in 1880, under orders from the Department, and no additional improvements of sufficient importance to merit the diversion of a portion of our time from the more important work east of the lake was regarded as necessary. But inasmuch as the verification of the survey of the Lajas line, made at the time, and upon which I had the honor to submit my report to the Department, will be an integral part of the plan I am about to propose for the construction of the canal and the estimated cost thereof, it may be proper to refer here to the most striking features of that survey, in order that the subject may be more clearly understood in its entirety.

It has been stated in the official reports of the surveys made by the United States expeditions of 1872–'73 that two lines had been located for the canal between Lake Nicaragua and the Pacific; one extending from the river Lajas, on the lake, to the port of Brito; the other, from the mouth of the river Del Medio to the same terminal point on the Pacific.

The point where there is a difference in location is between the lake and the first lock, on the Pacific slope; or, in other words, in that portion of the canal where the level of the lake is to be extended westerly. From the upper lock to the Pacific they have a location in common. The deepest cuttings required to reach the then proposed level of the canal are, for the Lajas line, 43¾ feet; for the Rio del Medio route, 134 feet; the length of the respective lines being 17.27 miles for the former, and 16.33 miles for the latter. The estimated cost of the Del Medio route exceeded that of the Lajas by several millions, but after mature consideration, and by reason of better natural surface drainage (so essential to the stability of a work of this kind, built in a country subject to a large rainfall), the river del Medio route was favored. On this line no water-course of considerable size would be taken into the canal, and as its water-shed is quite small, no fears were entertained of damages from freshets. On the Lajas route the conditions were dissimilar. The river Grande, a mountain stream of extensive and rapidly-inclined watershed and precipitous channel, approaches the canal from the southeast, and turning to the northeast, passes with many sinuosities through a narrow valley of a width but little greater than required for the canal. The channel of the river has an average width of 60 feet, and a depth of from 15 to 20 feet; and in its tortuous course alternately approaches the bases of spurs of a variable elevation projecting from the main hills on either side. Colonel Childs, who, in his plans for a canal by this route, had proposed to receive this stream into the canal by a waste-weir, estimated its maximum flow, calculated from the highest water marks on the banks and its mean sectional area and descent, at 5,670 cubic feet per second. I have been able to obtain, as a result of my own observations, and from information furnished by old residents in the vicinity, what may be regarded reliable data as to highest water marks, which, with the mean descent of the river for several miles and its average water prism, shows that the maximum flow may be as great as 10,000 cubic feet per second. It is quite certain that this stream seldom rises to the height assumed, and since its watershed is very abrupt, it remains but a few hours at the high-water marks pointed out to me. But so large a volume of water could not be received into the canal, at a time when least needed as a feeder, even under the most favorable conditions of flow, without danger to navigation and to the stability of the works. This was the greatest objection to this route, and to obviate it the preference was given, not without reluctance, to the river Del Medio route.

Partial examinations of this region, conducted during visits to Nicaragua subsequent to the official surveys, had greatly added to my former knowledge of the territory traversed by the canal. I was thus aware that important changes in the original location could be introduced, but there was required an instrumental examination in order to determine the measure of the benefits to be derived therefrom. My last survey on this portion of the canal route was for the special purpose of ascertaining the practicability of turning the river Grande into the lake, thereby leaving the narrow valley, now occupied by its channel, across the divide, free for the construction of the canal. With this purpose in view, the survey was begun at a well-known station and bench-mark of the survey of 1872, and was carried along the bed of the river Grande to its confluence with the river Cascabel, its main tributary. Special care was taken in noting all desirable sites for dams. Ascending the stream, the first was found at El Carmen, a point 3,000 feet, by the river, from the line of the canal. At this point the bed of the stream is 108.48 feet, and the highest water-mark 124.39 feet above mean sea-level. From the site of the proposed dam a transit and level line was run in a southeasterly direction, crossing the divide between the Grande and Lajas, with an elevation of 178.38 feet. (See profile of artificial channel.) The line then fell into the brook Comalcagua, an affluent of the river Juan Davila, the main branch of the Lajas. Following the brook across the extensive valley of Jocotes, the Juan Divila was reached at a distance of 3.88 miles from the bank of the river Grande, and at an elevation of 128.27 feet. To turn the river Grande into the Juan Davila, and through the latter and the Lajas into the lake, a dam 39.67 feet high will be required, this height being the aggregate of the difference of level between the river Grande and Juan Davila, and the necessary fall of the artificial channel as follows:

	Feet.	Feet.
Elevation of bottom of river Grande	110.87	.....
Elevation of high-water mark of river Grande	127.37	= 16.50
Elevation of water in Juan Davila	128.27	0.90
Elevation of high water in San Juan Davila	140.73	= 12.46
Fall of artificial channel at 2.53 feet per mile	.....	9.81
Height of dam above bottom of river Grande		39.67

The required height of the dam being established, it was observed that in times of high floods the water in the artificial channel would inundate, to the depth of two or three feet, the valley of Jobito, and possibly escape into the river through some pass between the hills. Another site for a dam was in consequence fixed some distance above the first, and the line for the artificial channel was relocated over higher ground. The profile (Plate 4) represents the corrected line and elevation of dam resulting therefrom. The proposed channel is 75 feet wide at the bottom, 15 feet deep; has slopes of 1 to 1 and 2 to 1, respectively, for rock and earth excavation, and with the proposed fall of 2.53 feet per mile will have discharging capacity of 10,273 cubic feet per second, or more than the largest estimated flood of the river Grande. The elevation of the water of the Juan Davila, at its confluence with the artificial channel, is 128.27 feet in the dry season and 140.73 feet at high floods, or 18 and 30 feet, respectively, above high lake; and the distance from the river being about six miles, there will be a fall of from three to six feet per mile, which in the broad channels of the Juan Davila and Lajas, need occasion no apprehension of the waters rising upwards of nine feet above highest recorded floods backing into the Grande and flowing over the dam.

Having established the practicability of diverting the river Grande, I directed my attention to a careful examination of the narrow valley occupied by the river, having in view a relocation of the canal route, so as to utilize the channel of the river wherever practicable, avoid the hills on both sides, and enlarge the radii of the curves as much as the topography of the country would permit. The relocation made, as shown by the map and profile, is more favorable than was expected; and the estimated cost of the work shows the large amount saved by the substitution of this route for that of the river Del Medio, while the drainage of the latter is in no respects better than that of the former.

THE PROPOSED ROUTE.

The proposed route extends from the harbor of Greytown, on the Caribbean Sea, to Brito, on the Pacific. Its total length is 169.8 miles, of which 38.98 miles will be excavated canal, and 130.82 miles navigation by Lake Nicaragua, the river San Juan (the outlet of the lake), the basin of the river San Francisco, and through seven locks. A canal without locks is impracticable across Nicaragua, and one with locks must necessarily have the lake for its summit level. This inland sea is about 90 miles long and from 35 to 45 miles wide. In the rainy season of 1878 its surface attained an elevation of 110 feet above the mean level of the sea, and this plane has been assumed as the summit level of the canal. The lake will be connected with the Pacific by a canal, and with the Atlantic by slack-water navigation in the river San Juan, by a short section of canal from the river San Juan to the basin of the river San Francisco, navigation through this basin, and by a canal from the eastern end of that basin to the Caribbean Sea. The route has been divided into three divisions, viz: Western, middle, and eastern.

Western division.—This section extends from the western shore of the lake to the port of Brito, on the Pacific, a distance of 17.27 miles. It leaves the lake at the mouth of the river Lajas, the channel of which it follows for about 1½ miles. The river here turns to the south, and it is proposed to divert its waters by means of an artificial channel emptying into the lake about one mile to the south of the present mouth, and thus leave its bed free for the canal. The line then crosses a plain three-fourths of a mile wide, and enters the valley of the Guscoyal, a small tributary of the Lajas proceeding from the summit, which it follows to the highest point of the line 4.7 miles from the lake. This point is 41.41 feet above high lake, and is situated in a valley about two miles wide. The line then descends at the rate of about nine feet to the mile, over a moderately undulating country, and in 1¾ miles meets the Rio Grande, a large mountain stream, which drains an extensive area of the eastern slope of the Cordillera. It has been already stated in this report that this stream is proposed to be diverted into the lake, so as to leave its channel free for the canal.

About 1,000 feet to the north of the point where the canal first crosses the river the brook Chocolata or Espinal enters the Rio Grande at the extreme of a sharp bend, where a waste-weir will have to be constructed to receive it into the canal. The line of the canal then follows the valley of the tortuous Rio Grande by curves of 4,500 and 4,000 feet radii, cutting across many of its sharp bends, or occupying the channel in short reaches, and in about 1½ miles it frees itself from the crowding hills, approaching from either side, and runs through a broad valley as it curves to the westward in the direction of Las Serdas. This point is 8.94 miles from the lake, and is the junction of this route with that of the Rio del Medio, recommended by the expedition of 1872–'73. Beyond Las Serdas the canal follows the valley of the Rio Grande, with an average inclination of nine feet to the the mile, to Brito, a distance of 8.33 miles, making a total of 17.27 miles from the lake to the sea. Along this last section the canal cuts projecting bends of the river at four different places, artificial channels being, in those cases, provided for the river. It is proposed to pass the Tola River and several small water-courses coming from the north under the canal, and as the bed of the river is at all points, between Las Serdas and Tola, several feet below the water in the canal, seven waste-weirs are proposed for the discharge of surplus water. Ditches are proposed along the lower portion of the canal to intercept the surface drainage and convey it to the sea. To overcome the difference of level between the lake and low tide at Brito, four locks are proposed, the variable lift of the lower one being controlled by the conditions of the tide, which at Brito has a mean rise and fall of 8.98 feet. This lock has been situated 1.4 miles from the harbor, with a view of securing firmer foundations, and less disturbance due to the influence of the sea. That portion of the canal is proposed to be enlarged, so as to make it practically an extension of the harbor, where ships can be waiting or pass each other as the case may be. The other three locks are located to the best advantage as to foundations and economy in the excavations, but avoiding, as far as practicable, raising the level of the canal above that of the adjacent country. The lifts proposed are as follows: For Lock No. 4, 26.4 feet; for Lock No. 5, 29.7 feet; for Lock No. 6, 29.7 feet, and for Lock No. 7, a variable lift of from 24.2 to 33.18 feet, depending on the state of the tide. A full description of these locks and of the system of gates proposed to be used will be given under the head of "Locks" further on.

Middle division.—This section extends from the western shore of the lake to the western slope of the "divide," between the basin of the river San Francisco and that of the San Juanillo. The total distance is 133.05 miles, and may be divided as follows: Lake navigation, 56.50 miles; navigation by the river San Juan, 64.54 miles; navigation through the basin of the San Francisco (including two short sections of canal, amounting in the aggregate to 3 miles), 12.01 miles. The lake navigation extends from the mouth of the river Lajas to San Carlos, at the head of the river San Juan. Twenty-eight feet of water can be carried to within 2,400 feet of the mouth of the Lajas. Along the latter distance some rock excavation under water and dredging will be needed to extend deep water to the entrance to the canal. From the 28-foot curve on the west side to within 8 miles of the outlet, the lake is deep and free to navigation. In those 8 miles dredging in soft mud to a mean depth of cut of 3½ feet will be required to secure the proposed depth of 28 feet. Along that distance a channel 150 feet wide at the bottom, with slopes of 3 to 1, has been estimated for. It is proposed to obtain slack-water navigation in the river San Juan by the construction of a dam 52 feet high at Ochoa, 64 miles from the lake. A fall of three-quarters of an inch to the mile, or a total of 4 feet for the whole distance, has been allowed for the slope of the river; but practically that portion of the stream will be converted into an extension of the lake, where, with the exception of the first 28 miles, from the lake to Toro Rapids, the navigable channel will be at no point less than 1,000 feet wide, with a depth varying from 26 to 130 feet. Between the lake and Toro Rapids, rock blasting under water and dredging to a depth of 41½ feet will be required at several places, amounting in the aggregate to 24 miles. The average depth of water, as raised by the dam, over the shallow places where deepening has been estimated for, is 23 feet, while the proposed channel is 28 feet deep by 125 feet wide at the bottom, with slopes of 1 to 1 in rock, and 2 to 1 in dredgable material.

It will be observed that the dam being placed below the confluence of the river San Carlos, the waters of this river will have either to be received into the summit level of the canal or arrested by an embankment and diverted through an artifical channel into the river San Juan below the dam. A cross-section of that river just below the forks (see Plate 6) shows that the latter plan can be carried out at no great expense, especially as the embankment, or crib is not intended to stand the pressure of the water, which should percolate freely through it, retaining the same level on either side; its purpose being only to intercept the sedimentary matter brought down by the stream. I believe, however, that under the proposed conditions such a precautionary measure is unnecessary, as the valley of the San Carlos will be turned into an extension of the lake, of which the river San Juan is also an integral part. Its present rapid current will thus be effectually checked and its scouring and sediment-carrying power utterly destroyed. The light matter which may yet be carried in suspension during floods, as far down as the San Juan, will either be carried over the dam immediately below, or partially deposited in the deep channel where it cannot do harm.

The dam is located between two steep, rocky hills, and its effective length on the crest will be 1,255 feet. The mean depth of water in the river is but 6.6 feet and the maximum 17 feet, close to the right abutment. No boring could be made to ascertain the nature of the foundations, but judging from the rock cropping out on the side hills and on the banks close to and below the water, it may well be supposed that rock underlies the gravel and sandy bottom. The foundations have been estimated as 20 feet below the surface of the water throughout the whole distance across, and the entire body of the dam to be of cement concrete, with a wood lining on the top and lower side. A strong apron is proposed to prevent undermining by the fall of the water (see Plate 5), and the necessary wing walls are also provided for.

On the right margin of the river, immediately above the dam, a break in the hills forms the valley of the Machado, and just in the rear of the range, the last spur of which forms the right abutment of the dam, another narrow valley extends easterly from that of the Machado. The first valley offers an excellent entrance to the canal, free from the influences of the river current, and the latter has been taken advantage of, for a distance of 3,300 feet, as a portion of the canal itself, where but light cutting will be required on the side of some projecting spurs to improve the navigation.

From the head of this valley the canal cuts across a broken country of moderate elevation, confined by high hills. It soon falls into a deep, narrow ravine, discharging into the San Juan, where a short embankment is proposed, so as to preserve the summit level in the canal. In a distance of 1.82 miles from the beginning of the cut at the head of the entrance valley, the canal enters the basin of the river San Francisco, which it follows to the Saltos de Elvira, at the foot of the "divide;" first through the valley of the main stream down to its confluence with the tributary Caño de las Chanchos, and thence up the valleys of the latter and of the Arroyo de las Cascadas, to the end of the middle division, at the foot of the dividing ridge. It is believed that this basin extends from the base of the divide to within $1\frac{3}{4}$ miles of the valley in the rear of the dam at Ochoa, and that by making a short detour to the north of the line of survey, it will be found navigable along that distance; but as our limited time would not permit of more extensive investigation in that direction, the line of actual location has been closely adhered to, and some cutting, for about $1\frac{1}{4}$ miles, is estimated for to secure the necessary depth.

It is proposed to retain the summit level, as established above this dam, throughout this basin by an embankment 6,500 feet long on the crest and 51 feet maximum depth, connecting two high hills confining the valley of the San Francisco as it turns in its southerly course to discharge its waters into the San Juan.

This deep, broad basin is regarded as a striking feature in this route, not only from economical considerations, but because it affords an almost unrestricted navigation for 8.5 miles, where ships can wait or pass each other, as the traffic may require. It presents also a favorable solution of the important problem of drainage. This artificial lake will be the recipient or ultimate drain of all the water-shed of the river San Francisco and its tributaries, with three outlets, by which its water can be kept under perfect control and floods effectually prevented. The water in the basin will either back through the canal into the river San Juan and over the dam, pass through the locks in the eastern division, or discharge over a waste-weir, 1,000 feet in length, cut through the hill at the southeasterly extremity of the embankment across the valley of the San Francisco. There will also be cut through this same hill, for use in an emergency, a tunnel controlled by gates, and large enough to discharge the whole flow of the San Francisco in floods, or even empty the basin if necessary.

Eastern division.—Begins at the Saltos de Elvira, in the valley of the Arroyo de las Cascadas, and extends to the harbor of San Juan del Norte, or Greytown, on the Caribbean Sea, a distance of 18.83 miles in an air line, and 19.48 miles by the canal; all in excavation. Within this 19.48 miles is comprised 63 per cent. of total amount, and 61 per cent. of total cost of excavation for the entire canal, and being an entirely new location, with new and salient features, as a lock of unusual lift, &c., it demands a full description.

Beginning, then, at the Saltos de Elvira, at the eastern extremity of the proposed artificial lake in the San Francisco Valley, the proposed location of the canal runs nearly due east, up the broad, flat, clean-wooded upper valley of the arroyo, a distance of about 1,600 feet; the average elevation of this valley being 125.132 feet above the sea-level, and 19.132 feet above the level of the water in the canal. Thence ascending the east branch, cutting a spur here and there, the "divide" is reached, at an elevation of 280 feet, and about 4,600 feet distant from the Saltos. The line then curves gently to the southeast (radius 10,733 feet) for about 2,500 feet, across the little plain at the summit, cuts a steep, narrow spur, enters the second section of the Deseado, referred to previously, the bed of which it follows for a short distance, then crosses to the left bank and reaches the site of Lock No. 3, in a rocky spur of the northern hills, 14,200 feet distant from the Saltos; the average cut for this distance being 119.5 feet above the water in the canal. As noted above, the elevation of the "divide," between the western and eastern flowing waters, is 280 feet, but it being naturally impossible to locate the canal to conform to all the turns of the valley, the line cuts several spurs which rise a number of feet above this height. I confess to being disappointed at the elevation of this divide, but it only goes to show how little dependence can be placed upon even the apparently most reliable indications in these dense, as it were blindfolded, tropical wilds.

At Lock No. 3, the summit level, stretching from Lock No. 4 beyond the lake, a distance of 144.8 miles, ends, and the level of the canal drops 53 feet, by a lock carved in the solid rock.

Passing, by easy curves 4,800 and 5,280 feet radius, down the widening valley of the Deseado, Lock No. 2 is reached, 4,600 feet from Lock No. 3. This lock drops the canal 27 feet, and at this lower level it passes along the still widening and gradually sloping valley of the Deseado, in a northeasterly direction, a distance of 15,000 feet, to Lock No. 1, which lowers it 26 feet to the sea-level, and from which it crosses the flat basin of the San Juanillo, cutting that stream in several places, and the swamps of the lagoon region, to the harbor of Greytown, a distance of 61,000 feet (the average height of surface above tide-level for this latter distance being only 10½ feet).

Between the Saltos and the "divide," the southern drainage area of the valley which the canal will occupy is very limited, only a narrow ridge separating this valley from that of the Limpio, nearly parallel, and less than a mile to the south. The Chanchos, on the other side, though farther removed than the Limpio, is still but a short distance to the north, leaving only the water from 2 or 3 square miles, drained by the upper arroyo, to contend with, and this, by means of two short channels, will be diverted into the San Francisco basin, just north of the entrance to the canal.

Across the "divide," and as far as a point about 4,000 feet above Lock No. 3, the natural drainage is away from the canal, the Deseado flowing nearly parallel to and from 500 to 1,300 feet north of it. At this point, where the canal first cuts the Deseado, the latter will be diverted by a channel north of the canal to Lock No. 3, and from here to the last intersection of the canal with the Deseado, a distance of some 43,000 feet, the canal will be protected on both sides by drainage channels, formed partly by the present bed of the stream and partly by artificial ditches.

The remainder of the canal, also about 43,000 feet from the Deseado to the sea, will be protected by embankments, an artificial channel being cut south of the canal to divert the San Juanillo, and another north of the canal to give Laguna Benard and its tributaries an independent outlet to the sea.

From the Saltos de Elvira to Lock No. 3, rock, underlying a few feet of earth, may be counted upon the entire distance; from Lock No. 3 to Lock No. 1, loose earth, gravel, clay, and rock in the deeper cuts; while from Lock No. 1 to San Juan del Norte, a distance of some 12 miles, nearly if not all material will be dredgable; and this portion, as on the west side at Brito, will be widened until it will be practically an extension of the harbor 12 miles inland.

This entire division is densely wooded, magnificent hard-wood trees of gigantic proportions covering the slopes and valleys of the hill country, their topmost branches rustling in the cool, constant "trades," and palms in a score of varieties dotting the plains and lagoon region with an almost impenetrable mass of vegetation, all covered and woven and tangled and tied with countless vines and climbing and running plants.

DIMENSIONS OF THE CANAL.

The apparent insufficiency of the Suez Canal to accommodate a traffic of more than 6,000,000 tons a year without serious delay to navigation, due to its reduced sectional area and an inadequate number of turn-outs, shows that the dimensions proposed in Commander Lull's report of 1872–'73, for a canal across Nicaragua, should be considerably enlarged in estimating for a new route. It is proposed now not only to enlarge the water prism of the canal by increasing its width and depth, but to provide also two large basins at the extremities of the locks, where vessels can wait, or pass each other without delay. These turn-outs, together with the lake, river, and San Francisco basin, will greatly facilitate navigation by this route, and allow ships traveling in opposite directions to pass each other almost at all points. This modification of the dimensions and plans originally proposed, will necessarily involve a material increase in the estimated cost of the work; but it has been thought best to provide for what is regarded as actually necessary for a canal which will admit the passage of the largest ships now engaged in the commerce of the world, and a traffic of not less than 12,000,000 tons a year, without restrictions to navigation, than to propose for the sake of economy in the original construction, what the experience of the last few years in the only similar interoceanic ship-canal in the world proves to be inadequate. The following are the respective dimensions and salient features of the canal proposed in 1872–'73, and those here estimated for:

Provision has also been made for illuminating the whole route sufficiently to insure its safe navigation at night. A greater speed can be made in the canal, both on account of its enlarged dimensions and the protection of the slopes by stone-pitching, wherever it has been thought necessary. Several bends of the river San Juan have been cut off, and a more unimpeded navigation secured thereby.

The several cross-sections proposed for the various portions of the canal are represented in plate 3.

THE LOCKS.

The locks proposed have a uniform length of 650 feet between the gates, and a least width of 65 feet between the gate abutments. Locks Nos. 1, 2, 4, 5, and 6 have lifts of 26, 27, 26.4, 29.7, and 29.7 feet respectively. No. 3 has a lift of 53 feet, and No. 7, being a combination of tide and lift-lock, its lift will vary between 24.2 and 33.18 feet, depending on the state of the tide. It is believed that Nos. 1 and 7 will rest on firm, heavy soil, but timber and concrete foundations have been provided for in the estimates. Nos. 2 and 4 are estimated to rest on solid rock, and as for Nos. 5 and 6, the borings taken in 1873 show that stiff clay, compact sand, and gravel will be met with. No. 3 is proposed to be cut out of the solid rock in the eastern slope of the "divide," by which the maximum strength will be secured with the least expense; concrete will be used only to the extent required to fill cavities, to give the proper dimensions to the various parts, and to give a surface to the blasted rock. The other locks it is proposed to build of concrete, and all of them, No. 3 included, will have a heavy timber lining in the chambers and bays, extending from the top of the walls to 15 feet below the low-water level. (See Plates 7 and 8.)

Cribs on firm bottom, or fender-piles when piles can be driven, have been provided at the approaches to the locks for the protection and better guidance of ships into the locks. Provision has also been made for making ships fast to the lock-wales, so that the lines will, by means of floats, rise or fall with the ship, thus preserving the same tension on the lines while the vessel is kept on the axis of the lock. Each lock will be filled or emptied by two conduits, each 10 feet in diameter, extending on the sides of the locks from the upper to the lower reach of the canal, and twenty-two branch culverts, eleven on each side, connecting the main conduit with the lock chamber. The only operation required for either filling or emptying the lock will be, irrespective of the movements of the lock-gates, the opening and closing of the upper and lower main culvert-gates. The time required to fill or empty lock No. 3, of 53 feet lift, will be fifteen minutes, and for the other locks an average of eleven minutes. The question of the best style of gates for these locks has been a subject of much consideration. It is desirable to combine strength, economy in construction, rapid and simple movements, facilities for repairs or for renewing the gates, and the least danger of accident by vessels entering or leaving the locks.

I had concluded to recommend for all the locks iron sliding gates, which when not in use would be withdrawn into a recess on the side of the lock, as the system possessing the greatest advantages, but the tail-gate of lock No. 3, with a total height of 88 feet, of which 58 feet would project out of the water when the lock is empty, required additional provisions to counteract possible wind pressure and guide it safely across the chamber. Several designs had been prepared to accomplish that object, but none entirely satisfactory and all involving considerable expense in their construction and a loss of time in the operation. While engaged in this investigation, Civil Engineer R. E. Peary, U. S. N., my principal assistant, suggested a rolling gate, which is, in my opinion, an admirable solution of the problem, combining in itself all the desired conditions.

The device consists (see Plate 9) of a rolling or tumbling gate; a lateral recess in one side of the lock-chamber into which the gate retreats when opened; rails upon which the gate travels; a car spanning the recess and traveling back and forth upon a track laid on the top of the lock; and a rod strut, or pivoted truss, connecting the car to the gate. In shape the gate may be described as a rectangular upper portion resting on a curved lower portion, the inner or rear part of this curve being a quadrant of a circle of such radius that the length of the arc of the quadrant is equal to the width of the lock, so that the travel of the gate in rolling through 90° will carry it entirely within the gate recess. The lower part of the gate, to a point one or two feet above the lower water-level, and the inner or rear side of the gate will be built as a water-tight compartment to contain a shifting water ballast; the remainder of the gate being open trusses, plated on the down-stream side; the center of gravity being kept by this means near the center of the arc on which the gate rolls, and the balance more perfectly maintained. The gate travels preferably on rails raised above the floor of the lock in order to prevent any accumulation of foreign materials upon their surfaces.

Flanges upon the curved bottom of the gate prevent any lateral movement, and any possibility of slip forward or backward during maneuvering is precluded by four chains, each equal in length to the arc of the rolling quadrant, arranged in pairs, one pair being attached at one end to the gate at the upper extremity of the quadrant (the gate being closed and erect), and at the other end to the bottom of the lock directly under the lower extremity of the rolling quadrant. The other pair are attached at one end to the bottom of the gate at the lower extremity of the rolling quadrant, and at the other end to the bottom of the gate-recess, directly under the upper extremity of the rolling quadrant when the gate is open or in a horizontal position. Thus when the gate is closed and erect the chains in pair No. 1 are wound upon the periphery of the rolling quadrant, while those of pair No. 2 are lying straight and taut upon the bottom of the gate-recess; and, vice versa, when the gate is open or horizontal the chains of pair No. 2 are wound upon the periphery of the rolling quadrant, and those of pair No. 1 are lying straight and taut upon the bottom of the gate-recess.

At all intermediate points of movement one pair unwinding at the same rate that the other pair is wound up, thus rendering it impossible for the slightest slip to occur, while at the same time the utmost freedom of rotation is permitted.

At the top of the front face or end of the gate, one end of the connecting rod or truss, above referred to, is attached by a simple pin-joint, permitting free movement of the connecting-rod in a vertical plane with the pin as a center, the other end being attached to the car by pin-joints permitting the same movement in a vertical plane.

The car is a rigid rectangular frame spanning the gate-recess and supported on trucks traveling on two rails placed at right angles to the axis of the lock, one on each side of the gate-recess. Motion is given to this car by a compressed air or hydraulic engine situated on the car, which drives a shaft bearing two drums, and each of these drums carrying several turns of a fixed cable. The car is worked backward and forward by simply reversing the motion of the drums.

Before passing to a description of the manipulation of the gate, it may be said that the displacement of the lower water-tight compartment, when the gate is bearing on the rails, will always be largely in excess of the weight of the gate, therefore it is necessary to admit water, and it will be seen that the amount admitted may be so regulated that the gate shall exert a pressure of 5 or 50 tons on the rails, or shall just touch them without exerting any pressure; in other words, the gate may be adjusted to any weight.

The means of preventing any lateral movement of the bottom of the gate have already been noted. To prevent lateral motion or deflection of the upper part from the action of the wind, it is held in place in two ways: At its inner or rear upper corner by rollers; on the opposite faces of the gate-recess and at its upper front or outer corner by the connecting-rod, from the outer end of which wire-rope guys extend to the forward angles of the car, passing around sheaves at those points and thence to a capstan on the car. These guys form, with the connecting-rod, a rigid triangular truss, preventing any motion in the horizontal plane, yet at the same time adjustable by means of the capstan, so that the gate is always adjusted and supported precisely in its vertical plane of revolution.

Supposing, now, the gate to be closed or erect, the car spanning the gate-recess close to the edge of the lock and nearly over the rear face of the gate, the gate bearing slightly on the rails, yet, practically, floating; chains of pair No. 1 wound upon the gate, and those of pair No. 2 lying flat along the floor of the gate-recess. The car is started; the outer upper corner of the gate rises and moves back in response to the pull of the connecting-rod; the chains in pair No. 1 unwind from the bottom, while those of pair No. 2 wind upon the gate; the water-ballast shifts with the gate, neither assisting nor retarding its motion, but simply keeping it on the rails, and so prevented from rising by the water-ballast, from descending by the rails; kept from lateral motion at the bottom by the flanges, and at the top by the rollers and the connecting-rod; kept from forward or backward slip at the bottom by the chains and at the top by the car; free, weightless, water-borne, yet under perfect control and held as in a vise in every direction, the gate rapidly and smoothly retreats into the recess with the expenditure of only that amount of power necessary to give it velocity.

Minor details, such as the shape and arrangement of the gate recesses, the facing of the abutments with wood, to distribute and equalize the pressure, &c., are not novel and need no extended description.

A device, which may possibly be necessary, to close the gate upon the rear abutment is perhaps deserving of mention. It consists simply of a hydraulic cylinder set in the masonry of the abutment, the piston-rod of which is hooked-shaped at its outer end. The gate carries an eye-bolt which, when the gate is closed, passes over the hooked end of the piston-rod. The piston-rod being then forced inward the gate is drawn tightly against the abutment. The advantages of this gate are perfect control combined with ease; rapidity and simplicity of operation; most advantageous application of power; concentration of all moving mechanism on top of lock, where it is perfectly free of access; facility of access to all but a very small portion of the gate itself, for the purpose of painting and repairs, without interfering with the operation of the lock. This gate has been adopted for the tail-gate of Lock No. 3 (see Plate 7).

For the present I have estimated upon sliding gates for the other tail-gates and all head-gates, though eventually the rolling gate may be adopted for all.

The necessary machinery for moving the lock and culvert gates, for hauling ships in and out of the locks, for electric lights and other purposes, will be worked by hydraulic power.

CAPACITY OF THE CANAL.

In order to estimate with a fair degree of precision both the traffic-carrying capacity of the canal and the time of transit from the Atlantic to the Pacific, it will be well to refer to the Suez Canal, compare its dimensions with those proposed for Nicaragua, ascertain the average speed made by the largest ocean steamers passing through, and then, profiting by the experience in that water-way, to arrive at what may be reasonably expected with the conditions established for this project. The Suez Canal has a uniform depth of 26 feet and a width of 72 feet on the bottom throughout its entire length, with slopes of 2 to 1 or more, depending on the nature of the soil; the breadth at the surface of the water varying from 190 to 330 feet.

The area of water prism ranges, therefore, between a minimum of 3,406 square feet and a maximum of 5,226 square feet. The minimum radius of curve is 2,000 feet. Its entire length is opened to ships of all nationalities, provided their draught of water does not exceed 7.50 meters (24 feet 7 inches).

The maximum speed of all ships passing through the canal is fixed at 10 kilometers (equal to 5½ nautical miles, or 6.1 statute miles) per hour. (From Regulations for Navigation of Suez Canal.)

Vexatious delays, due to grounding in rounding the sharp curves and in going into and out of the sidings to allow other vessels to pass, and stoppages for the night, make the time of vessels in the canal range from 40 to 70 hours.

However, the average effective sailing speed, as given in the reports of the company, is 5 knots an hour. The passage has been made in 15 hours by starting at break of day and getting through before dark.

The following extracts from the reports of officers of United States naval vessels passing through the canal will be of interest in this connection.

Lieut. Commander C. F. Goodrich, U. S. N., navigator of the U. S. S. Tennessee, under date Suez, August 19, 1875, says:

As to steering apparatus, the only precaution taken was to see that the wheel ropes were very taut, that the ship might answer her helm instantly. The Tennessee averaged 5.3 knots through the canal (the maximum speed permitted); stopped three times to garé (gares are the turn-outs in the single-track road); spent one night in Lake Timsah, and was 16½ hours actually in motion.

It may be well to mention that each ship has her own "canal speed," fast enough to make her steer well, but not so fast as to wash the banks; a speed depending on the lines of the ship and her displacement. The pilot soon ascertains this rate and adheres to it strictly. The ship steered admirably, and while under way never touched the ground. In conclusion I would say that there appears to me no difficulty whatever in going through if drawing under 23 feet of water, provided the ship steers well. Quick, attentive helmsmen then solve the problem. The draught of the Tennessee was 20 feet 6 inches forward, and 22 feet 3 inches aft. Her length over all is 365 feet, and her beam 46 feet.

Report of the passage of the U. S. S. Alert, 1876; "Notes on the Suez Canal, by Commander J. D. Marvin, U. S. N.":

The curves, with the exception of an S, just north of Lake Timsah, are none of them sharp or difficult. The Khedive's yacht, a side-wheel vessel 400 feet long, 45 feet beam, and 65 feet over paddle-boxes, has passed through the canal several times. This of itself is the best proof of its navigability for anything afloat drawing less than 24 feet. The effect of wash, caused by the passage of large vessels, is not great; smaller ones, like the Alert, do no damage.

(The draught of the Alert was 13 feet 9 inches aft.)

Commander Sampson, of the Swatara, says:

Vessels passing through the canal are permitted to make 5½ knots only. I was surprised to find how much power is required to drive the ship at this low speed. We were making from 5 to 5½ knots, depending on the tide, while the power developed by the engines would have been sufficient to drive the ship from 7 to 7½ knots in the open sea.

(The Swatara was drawing 18 feet aft.)

The large English troop-ships are obliged to develop their full power to make 5 knots through the canal. Col. I. Stokes, one of the English directors, has said:

The fact that Her Majesty's troop-ships, vessels of 4,400 tons, 400 feet long, of 52 feet beam, and drawing 22 feet of water, pass through the canal in an average, on 49 voyages, of 17 hours under way, their average time in the canal being about 40 hours, affords a convincing proof of the sufficiency of the canal for all reasonable purposes as a mercantile highway. These ships, from their great height out of water, present unusual difficulties, as the large surface exposed to the action of the wind must cause them to make lee-way under a cross-wind more than vessels having less free-board. It is to be remarked that these vessels are perfect in their capacity for steering, and are handled in a most masterly manner; but beyond these advantages, attainable by every vessel, they enjoy no special privilege in the navigation of the canal, and have to take their turn in the sidings like others.

The commanding officer of the U. S. S. Marion reports to the Navy Department, under date May 19, 1885, as follows:

In this run, from Port Said to Ismaila, we had steam on four boilers, but on account of the vessel ahead of us we had to go dead slow the most of the time. The wind was light aft, current light and with us. We made about 4 knots over the bottom * * * . It is thought that when the canal is widened all vessels can go at a speed of 8 knots, or more, and * * * I have no reason to doubt that this will be the case. From Ismaila to Suez, with no vessel ahead of us, we made from 7 to 9 knots an hour * * * and through the lakes could have made 13 had we the power. The model of the Marion is a fine one, and she made no appreciable wash in the canal and met with no appreciable resistance.

Recently several ships have passed through portions of the canal at night, under all the restrictions of the company, and they experienced no great difficulty, by using electric lights. The chief difficulty is in the lakes, where, there being no range-lights, the pilot must depend on buoys for guidance * * * . We left Port Said at 7.15 a. m., on May 8, and arrived at Ismaila at 6.25 p. m. Went into garè at once, and passed vessels in garè twice. Left Ismaila at 4.30 a. m., and arrived at Suez at 1.40 p. m., having made the run in nine hours; one hour and forty minutes of which time was spent at anchor at Southern and Great Bitter Lakes, to permit vessels to pass. The greater part of the time we made a speed of from 7 to 9 knots, as we were the leading vessel.

(The Marion is 215 feet 9 inches long, 37 feet beam, and 17 feet 8 inches draught of water.)

During the year 1883, 3,307 vessels, with an aggregate net tonnage of 5,778,323, passed through the canal, the gross tonnage being 8,051,307. The mean effective sailing-time was 19 hours and 30 minutes, or an average speed of 5.1 miles an hour. The mean net tonnage per vessel was 1,747, and the mean gross tonnage, 2,435. The above-stated facts seem to show conclusively that vessels of 4,400 tons, 400 feet long, 52 feet beam, and drawing 22 feet of water can go through the Suez canal with an average speed of 6 statute miles per hour, and that the speed of smaller vessels varies between 6 and 8 miles per hour.

The following table, showing the dimensions proposed for the Nicaragua Canal in the several sections into which the route has been subdivided, is taken as a basis for computing the traffic-carrying capacity of the canal and the effective sailing-time from ocean to ocean.

An inspection of the table will show that in 22.37 miles, or 57 per cent., of the canal in excavation the prism is large enough for vessels in transit to pass each other, and of a sectional area in excess of the maximum area in the Suez Canal; that the remaining distance in which large vessels cannot conveniently pass each other is so divided that the longest is only 3.67 miles in length; that, with two exceptions, those short reaches of narrow canal are situated between the locks, and can be traversed by any vessel in less time than is estimated for the passage of a lock; consequently, unless a double system of locks be constructed, nothing will be gained by an enlargement of the prisms. The exceptions referred to are the rock cuts through the eastern and western divides, 2.58 and 3.67 miles, respectively, in length. The possible detention in the transit, due to those narrow cuts, which should not in any case exceed 45 minutes, would not justify the necessary increase of expense involved in an enlargement of the cross-section proposed. It will be observed that both the bottom width and the depth of the proposed canal are larger than those of the Suez Canal.

In the lake and in the largest portion of the Juan River vessels can travel as fast as at sea. In some sections of the river, and possibly in the basin of the San Francisco, although the channel is at all points deep and of considerable width, the speed may be somewhat checked by reason of the curves.

Estimated time of through transit by steamer.

	h.	m.
38.98 miles of canal, at 5 miles an hour	7	48
8.51 miles in the San Francisco basin, at 7 miles an hour	1	14
64.54 miles in the San Juan River, at 8 miles an hour	8	04
56.50 miles in the lake, at 10 miles an hour	5	39
Time allowed for passing 7 locks, at 45 minutes each	5	15
Allow for detentions in narrow cuts, &c	2	00
Total time	30	00

The experience of the Suez Canal shows that the actual time of transit is more likely to fall under than to exceed the above estimate.

The traffic of the canal is limited by the time required to pass a lock, and on the basis of 45 minutes (above estimated), and allowing but one vessel to each lockage, the number of vessels that can pass the canal in one day will be 32, or in one year 11,680, which, at the average net tonnage of vessels passing the Suez Canal, will give an annual traffic of 20,440,000 tons. This is on the basis that the navigation will not be stopped during the night.

With abundant water-power at the several locks and at the dam, there is no reason why the whole canal should not be sufficiently illuminated by electric lights; and with beacons and range-lights in the river and lake, vessels can travel at all times with perfect safety.

MATERIALS OF CONSTRUCTION.

On the western side of the lake a great variety of excellent construction timber abounds on the line of the canal and for many miles to the north and south of it. Its present market value exceeds but little the cost of the labor to cut it. In fact, it may be safely stated that in clearing the ground for the canal more timber can be obtained than will be actually needed for the purposes of the work. The valley of the San Juan River, from Toro Rapids to the San Juanillo, including the basin of the San Francisco, is also heavily timbered, the virgin forests having never been disturbed by the hand of man, except on the immediate river banks, where a small band of wood-choppers keep the river boats supplied with fuel. Much of this timber compares favorably in the most important characteristics with the best in the markets of the world, and its durability, both when exposed to the weather and under ground or water, has been fully demonstrated in its extensive and various uses in that country. From Greytown to Lock No. 1, a distance of about 12 miles, heavy timber is also found in the vicinity of the canal line, but of an inferior quality to that of the more elevated lands. However, for temporary structure it would answer the purpose as well.

No large quarries have been opened in Nicaragua, and with the exception of a limited number of coarse sandstone blocks, used in the construction of some public buildings, dimension stones are never employed. Rubble masonry is the construction method adopted where something neater and more substantial than the adobe is desirable, while bricks are seldom seen except on floors. The rubble walls are, as a rule, a roughly put up mass of mortar and broken stones of all sizes and shapes, in which the mortar predominates, depending altogether on the excellent quality of the lime for their stability. However, this primitive and defective method of construction has been constantly and successfully in use since the time of the "Conquest," in the construction of indigo vats and dams across streams, by which the waters are raised 20 feet or more. Some of these works have been standing over one hundred years, and, notwithstanding their constant exposure to strong currents and absolute neglect, they are now found in an almost perfect state of preservation. Reservoirs of the same construction, built above ground, with dimensions not in excess of what should have been adopted for the best material and workmanship, are also seen at several places without any indications of leakage, the mortar being as hard as the stone. This superior lime can be had at several places close to the line of the canal, and I am firmly of the opinion that when properly manufactured and manipulated it will be found the equal if not the superior to many of the cements in the market.

It is believed that large blocks of granite could be obtained from the east shore of the lake, but none is proposed to be used for the purposes of the canal. Concrete is the material recommended as the most suitable for the construction of the locks and the dam, and the best stone for its composition (hard trap) is found on the line of the canal and can be obtained for the expense of transportation from the excavations through the divides. Excellent clean sand and gravel abound on the shores of the lake, in the bed of the Rio Grande, in the western division, and in the river San Juan, from the forks of the San Carlos to Greytown. Suitable clay for the manufacture of bricks is met with at numerous points along the route.

CLIMATE, RAIN, AND HEALTH.

The National Institute of Granada has in late years supplied a need long felt by those visiting the country in the interest of science, by establishing a well-conducted system of meteorological observations, and it may be hoped that the advantages of that step in the right direction will be fully appreciated by the people, and these valuable investigations will soon be extended to other sections of the country. Previous to the present creditable organization of that institution, the only available reliable meteorological records were those obtained by Colonel Childs in 1850–'51, and by the United States surveying expeditions of 1872–'73, given by Captain Lull in his report. They were, however, the results of observations maintained for but a short time at the same place, and although interesting, could not be regarded as of much practical value. Colonel Childs's observations were taken at Rivas from September 7, 1850, to March 11, 1851, and in the valley of the San Juan River from the latter date to September 25, of the same year. His total rainfall for thirteen months was 101.735 inches, of which 72.88 inches fell in the valley of the San Juan. The expedition of 1872–'73 found at Virgin Bay, four miles south of Rivas, an aggregate fall of 47.79 inches from July 1, 1872, to March 14, 1873; and allowing a fall of 8 inches for the month of June, so as to complete the rainy season, the total rainfall for that year, on the west side of the lake, may be estimated at 56 inches. In that section of the country the seasons are well defined. It may be said that the wet season begins on the 15th of May and lasts until the 15th of November; the dry weather comprising the other six months of the year, in which practically no rain falls.

The above interesting table may be accepted as a fair average of the temperature and rainfall on the west side of the lake. In some years the rainfall may reach 60 inches, while in others it may be less than the total given for 1884, which has been regarded as a remarkably dry year. The mean may be taken at 50 inches.

In the valley of the San Juan the temperature may not vary materially from that given in the tables, but the wet season is generally longer, with more copious rainfall, heavy showers, especially at night, being not unusual in what is called the dry season, and the total rainfall may reach, I believe, 100 inches.

As to the health of the country, I have but little to add to what has already been stated by Captain Lull and by Dr. J. T. Bransford, U. S. N., who, as medical officer of the previous surveying expeditions, and in subsequent trips to Nicaragua, has made a thorough study of the sanitary conditions of the country. Being ordered by the Department to the United States steamship Iriquois, while on his way from Nicaragua, I am unable to submit now the report of his observations while with the late surveying party. I can say, however, that during the four months we remained in the country, of which more than three months were of constant, arduous work, exposure, and privation, no officer of the party was ever affected by sickness due to climatic causes; and as for the natives attached to the party, their only ailments were due to bruises caused by want of protection for their feet and limbs. It may be proper to add that two of the officers had not visited the country before, and that our work was confined to the uninhabited and what is generally regarded as the most unhealthy portion of the country.

WATER SUPPLY

Lake Nicaragua has a surface area of about 2,600 square miles, and a water-shed of not less than 8,000 square miles.

Careful gauges of the San Juan River, at its lowest stage, between the lake and Toro Rapids, taken by Lieut. J. W. Miller in 1873, showed a minimum flow of 11,390 cubic feet per second. Colonel Childs estimated the discharge, with full lake, in the rainy season, at 18,059 cubic feet per second, which gives a mean flow of 14,724 cubic feet per second, or 1,272,153,600 cubic feet per day.

	Cubic feet.
Water required for one lockage on the east side	2,580,305
Water required for one lockage on the west side	1,465,944
Water required for one lockage on both sides	4,046,249
Water required for thirty-two double lockages per day	129,479,968
Which will give a daily excess of the lake supply only of	1,142,673,632

To the latter amount must be added the flow of the several tributaries of the San Juan River between the lake and the dam, and also the San Francisco and its tributaries, which will more than compensate for leakage and evaporation.

The latter, however, need not be provided for, it being well known that in those latitudes the condensation during the night fully compensates for the evaporation in the day.

HARBORS.

No changes are here proposed in the methods recommended in Captain Lull's report for the improvement of the harbors at either terminus of the canal. But the change of location in the tide-lock near Brito, from the inner end of the harbor, as was before designed, to a place 1.4 miles inland, will require material modifications in the arrangement of the anchorage. The canal will be enlarged along that distance, which may be regarded as a portion of the harbor itself, where vessels can either lie or pass each other without inconvenience. A large bay, for the sole purpose of accommodating a number of ships, seems, therefore, unnecessary with the new system, the main object being to have an easy entrance to the harbor, and an extensive area inside for the expansion of the swell, in order to secure access to the lock, free from the influence of the sea. This, I believe, can be effectively accomplished by the plan proposed.

The map of Greytown submitted with this report was made by engineers employed by the Government of Nicaragua, and is believed to be correct. It shows no marked change in the conditions of that place since the United States Government survey of 1872–'73, except an increased silting up in the inner bay, and a slight recession of the six-fathom line off-shore.

The method before recommended will be equally adapted to the present conditions, with greater facilities and economy in its execution, on account of the near supply of stone for the breakwater from the "divide cut," instead of Monkey Point, as originally estimated for.

The same remarks as to the enlargement at the lower section of the canal in the vicinity of Brito are applicable to this side, except that the enlarged section at the level of the sea is 11.6 miles long against 1.4 on the Pacific slope.

The average range of the tide at Greytown is but 18 inches, and consequently need not be considered in the constructions and operations of the lower lock.

ESTIMATES.

The estimate of the cost of the canal has been prepared after careful computations of all the works required for the completion of the canal and its accessories, from the data obtained by an actual location of the line, and the plans prepared after due consideration for the different works required.

The canal route recommended is the result of an actual instrumental location, after extended and searching examinations and a full appreciation of all the advantages and disadvantages presented by the topography of the country.

The surveys have been conducted with the utmost care, and sufficiently in detail to insure a close estimate of the cost of the work.

There is, however, one element of uncertainty in the computations which we were not able to eliminate. I allude to our limited information as to the geological formation of the country traversed by the canal. The exact amount of each of the different kinds of material to be removed can only be obtained by boring at short intervals along the line and down to the bottom of the canal, a work which the last expedition was not able to undertake. Our investigations in that respect were confined to the beds and banks of streams and to surface indications. The expedition of 1872–'73 was provided with some boring tools, soundings were taken to the required depth, at short distances apart, between the summit of the western "divide" and the Pacific, and the information thus obtained has been utilized in preparing this estimate.

The error resulting from this lack of information cannot, however, be great. It has been our purpose rather to exaggerate than to underestimate the difficulties likely to be met with in the execution of the work.

Through the eastern "divide" where trap-rock was seen in the beds of streams and cascades from 40 to 60 feet in height, the excavation, 14,300 feet long and 119 feet average depth above the surface of the water in the canal, has been estimated as in rock with but 10 feet top covering of earth.

All other comparatively deep cuts, where the indications were not so decided, have also been computed on the same basis.

Soft soil has been estimated for only in the low alluvial valleys where only clay and sand can be found to a great depth, and on the west side where the nature of the soil has been ascertained by borings. It is believed, therefore, that when a more careful investigation is made, the amount of rock to be removed will be found much less than the total here given.

It is admitted that the cut through the eastern "divide" is a very serious undertaking; in fact, the heavy work in the whole route may be said to be concentrated in those 14,300 feet in length; but with an abundant water-power on both slopes, convenient dumping-ground close at hand, an inexhaustible supply of timber for fuel and constructive purposes, the assistance of a railroad, and with the modern appliances for blasting and removing rock in large masses, the work can be thoroughly and economically done in less than five years. Much of the rock obtained from this excavation will be utilized in the construction of the breakwater at Greytown, the locks, the dam, and the lining of the embankments and canal slopes. The cost of this material at the different places where it is proposed to be used will be only that of transportation, the loading in the car being charged to the cost of excavation. The other excavations along the line need no special mention. With the exception of that portion through the "western divide" where the average depth of cut is 30 feet for a distance of 2.27 miles, they are of moderate depth, the greater portion just large enough to retain the water in the canal below the surface of the ground.

Dumping-ground can be found at convenient distances at all points, and for nearly one-third of the whole distance the excavation will be done by dredging, and the material deposited directly on both sides of the cut. On the west side the rock from the summit cut is proposed to be utilized as on the east side, in the construction of locks, the dam across the Rio Grande, weirs, culverts, the breakwater at Brito, and in protecting the slopes of the canal.

A railroad has been estimated for from Greytown to the dam across the San Juan River and between the lake and Brito, which, together with the lake and river, will afford easy and economical transportation along the whole route. Provision has also been made for lighting the whole canal, so that navigation need not be stopped at night. With ample water-power at the locks and the dam, and in the streams on both sides of the eastern "divide," the whole canal in excavation and the ports, can be illuminated by electricity at but little expense. As for the river and lake, beacons and range-lights will be a more economical and equally efficient method.

That the prices to be adopted in estimating the cost of the canal should be greater than would be required for similar work located in an improved section of this country is an admitted fact. A large percentage of this excess will be in the cost of transporting laborers and tools and machinery of every description for the prosecution of the work. The country along the river and between Greytown and the dam being uninhabited, and that between the lake and the Pacific sparsely populated, the erection of houses for the protection of property and the proper accommodation and preservation of health of the workmen will be necessary. These, however, need only be temporary structures, built with material obtainable along the line of the canal at but little more cost than the labor of handling it. Considerable delay and expense will be found unavoidable in the installation or preliminary preparations for commencing the work.

Another contingency which may possibly produce a marked influence on the cost of the canal is the contingent physical inability of the imported workmen to perform the ordinary daily labor as compared to that accomplished in the execution of similar work in a more temperate climate. The laboring classes in Nicaragua, when under proper control, are capable of an activity and endurance under great fatigue and exposure to the elements scarcely equaled in any other country, and with no apparent injury to their health; yet the same capabilities cannot be expected of unacclimated foreigners, accustomed to different habits of life. It is believed that not less than 6,000 excellent laborers can be obtained from the Central American States, and that with a judicious management all the help needed can be obtained from the Gulf States in this country, where the climatical conditions are in many respects similar to those prevailing over a large part of the canal route. The skilled labor will have to be procured, as a rule, from a more developed section of this country, but of that class only a comparatively small number will be needed. On the west side of the lake, where the greater number of laborers will be employed, the climate is not excelled for salubrity by any other portion of Central America; and in that portion of the eastern section, from the dam to Greytown, which is the only locality where trouble from climatic causes is to be apprehended, the concentration of the work into two masses, one of dredging, the other of rock excavation, will permit the use of machinery to such an extent as to greatly reduce the number of laborers; in fact, almost exclude entirely manual labor.

The small force necessary to handle and attend the machinery will be either housed on the dredgers or in quarters on the "divide," where, with the purest of water from the streams, and the cool fresh "trades" constantly sweeping in from the sea, the slightest sanitary regulations will insure perfect health the year round.

The prices adopted are believed to be sufficient to cover the cost of the work under any possible unfavorable conditions, if controlled by an intelligent and business-like management.

It is estimated that the canal can be completed in six years, of which time one year will be expended in perfecting the location and making the necessary preparations for active operations.

CONCLUSION.

The canal route here described and recommended for consideration is believed to be perfectly practicable, free from complicated or doubtful engineering problems, and the most economical, convenient, and safe route for interoceanic ship communication between the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans, not only through the State of Nicaragua, but across the American Isthmus. A final and more detailed location of the line may show where changes in details can be made in the interest of an economical construction; but the general direction and main features cannot, it is firmly believed, be greatly improved upon. Between the lake and the Pacific the line was first located by Colonel Childs in 1850–'51, by the United States surveying expedition in 1872–'73, and subsequently revised by me by order of the Department in 1880. That portion of the route traverses a comparatively well-developed and open country, the topography of which is well known, and there seems to be but little room left for further improvements. The lake and San Juan River were also surveyed by Colonel Childs and the United States expeditions, with remarkably close results, and the information then obtained has been made use of in preparing plans and estimates for this project. There remained, therefore, but a limited field for our investigations, viz: between the river San Juan and Greytown, a region which had been partially explored by me with encouraging results, pointing to a more favorable location for the canal line than that proposed by previous surveys. To the verification of these promising indications the late surveying party devoted 95 days of constant, arduous field-work, and the result of its labors, contained in this report, will, it is hoped, be regarded a satisfactory compensation for our efforts. The line located by former expeditions has been reduced by 21.49 miles of canal excavation and 11.46 miles in total length from ocean to ocean. The estimate of cost on the same basis as to dimensions of prism, prices, &c., would be $48,800,167, as compared with $65,722,147, the estimate of former surveys, a reduction of $16,921,980.

An estimate of the cost of the work, 11 sheets of drawings, a report on the geological specimens collected by the party, and fifty-six photographs, illustrating certain interesting features of the country, are submitted with this report.

Before closing, I take pleasure in expressing my high appreciation of the valuable services rendered by, and the hearty co-operation received, from the officers of the party. To the untiring energy, perseverance, and ability of Civil Engineer R. E. Peary, U. S. N., and Ensign W. I. Chambers, U. S. N. (the former of whom, during a large portion of the time, was away from the main party with a small force of natives, dependent entirely on his own resources and judgment, and the latter, who, in addition to the important services rendered in connection with the field-work, discharged in a most satisfactory manner the onerous duties of executive in the camp organization), is entirely due the success of the survey, and their services in the office work afterwards have been equally invaluable.

Owing to the remarkably good health enjoyed by the party, the professional ability of Dr. J. T. Bransford, U. S. N., was rarely called into play; but his services in making reconnaissances, for which he was always ready and willing, in giving what might be called preventive advice, for which his long experience in that climate rendered him specially fitted; in collecting geological and zoölogical specimens, and in relieving me from the care and responsibility of the health of the party, were invaluable.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. G. MENOCAL,
Civil Engineer, U. S N., in charge of surveying party.

Hon. WILLIAM C. WHITNEY,
Secretary of the Navy.

LETTER FROM THE DIRECTOR OF THE GEOLOGICAL SURVEY.

UNITED STATES GEOLOGICAL SURVEY,
DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, D. C., December 4, 1885.

SIR: In response to your request of August 2 that an examination should be made by the Geological Survey of a box of specimens of rocks collected along the line of the proposed Nicaraguan Canal, I have the honor to inclose a list of the same as determined by Mr. J. S. Diller, geologist, together with his observations on the availability of the different rocks as building material.

The collection contains sixteen specimens, from which thin sections were prepared for microscopic study. Although the specimens are somewhat weathered, the alteration has not advanced far enough to render their identification a matter of great difficulty.

Almost the whole collection is composed of volcanic lavas, such as basalts, andesites, and rhyolites, with their associated fragmental deposits, which appear to form a large portion if not almost the whole of the mountain range in that region. The only specimens which are not of volcanic origin are one of metamorphic rock, collected at the foot of the Machuca Rapids in the San Juan River, and another of quartz, apparently in the same neighborhood, near Machuca.

The quartz contains cavities which are lined by well-defined crystals of the same mineral and is evidently a local formation of very limited extent. On the contrary, the metamorphic rock must have a much wider distribution and at considerable depth from the foundation upon which the volcanoes have poured out their lavas. It is composed largely of quartz, with a variable quantity of other minerals, especially silicates, and, as far as may be judged from the small specimens in the collection, it seems probable that this is one of the most promising localities for building-stones along the line of the canal. This is, however, a matter which can be but partially determined by an examination of hand specimens, from the fact that the value of a ledge of rock in furnishing stones for construction is not determined so much by the mineralogical composition of the rock as by the lines of fracture and easiest division which run through it. The rock contains considerable iron pyrites which, upon exposure to the disintegrating influence of the atmospheric agents, will give it a rusty appearance, but not materially affect its durability.

The basalts, of which there are six specimens in the collection, are for the most part fine grained and very compact, but there are a few which are more coarsely crystalline. The feldspar, augite, olivine, and accessory minerals of which these basalts are composed, present no peculiarities worthy of mention. The rock is remarkably tough, but sometimes dresses into regular shape with comparative ease, when it can be obtained in large pieces, free from fractures. It frequently happens, however, that lava streams, as a natural result of their mode of consolidation, are penetrated by many fissures which divide the mass into portions too small to be used for building.

In basaltic lavas the fissures are frequently at right angles to the upper or cooling surface of the lava stream, thus dividing it into columns, which are not infrequently used for fence-posts. In rather coarsely crystalline basalts these columns are sometimes large enough, when dressed, to furnish good building-stones, especially for abutments and similar structures. A lava stream of this sort may be traced for over fifty miles down the Sacramento Valley from Mount Shasta, and is extensively used for railroad bridges.

As far as may be surmised from an examination of the hand specimens, it may be suggested that of all the basalts represented in the collection the ones from Ochoa and the bed of Cañito Limpio, near Station 90, appear to be best for construction.

Andesite is a kind of lava named from the mountain range among whose volcanoes it occurs in large quantities. There are four specimens of andesite in the collection, and all are of the variety hypersthene andesite, which has lately been shown by the United States Geological Survey to be one of the most important and widely-distributed lavas of Western North America. It forms a large portion of the Cascade Range in California and Oregon, as well as isolated tracts throughout the Great Basin, Arizona, the Rocky Mountains, and Mexico. Of all the lavas I have observed over a wide extent of country, it has most frequently a platy structure which renders it entirely unfit for building purposes, and the specimens of hypersthene andesite in this collection indicate that the same feature is common to it along the Nicaragua Canal.

The rhyolitic lavas of that region are not so completely crystalline as the andesites and basalts, and their determination is a matter of great difficulty. The porphyritic crystals of feldspar, a large part of which is plagioclase, are imbedded in a groundmass containing much amorphous matter. These lavas are more silicious than the others, and when compact are considerably harder but not as heavy and tenacious as the andesites and basalts. They frequently take an excellent polish, but rarely furnish as good building material as the more basic lavas.

The volcanic tufas, of which there are several specimens, are composed of fragmental material, the ashes, lapilli, and scoria ejected from volcanoes, and although they are not likely to afford suitable material for building, they will not present so many difficulties to excavation.

The problem of establishing interocean transit for ships across the belt of country joining North and South America is one of greatest national interest, and the expenses, according to the various methods proposed to cross at Panama, Nicaragua, or Tehuantepec, have been estimated at from 50 to 350 millions. In estimating these expenses, especially where extensive excavations have to be made, it is evident that the geologic structure of the country is a most important element.

Accurate topographic surveys of the several routes have been made, and yet it is not clear that any of the estimates submitted previous to this report are based upon a careful study of the geology of the region. Although there has been considerable geologic reconnaissance in that region, it appears to be very meager as compared with the magnitude of the enterprise undertaken, and these are deeply concerned, not only in the material excavated and used in construction, but also the value and distribution of coal and other mineral products of that region.

Coal has been reported from the region of Panama, but there is some reason to question its identification, from the fact that certain volcanic rocks of the same region have thin bands so closely resembling coal as to deceive an observer before a careful diagnosis of the substance is made.

Unfortunately, the collection does not represent a complete section from the Caribbean Sea to the Pacific. All the specimens were collected east of Lake Nicaragua, in the valley of the San Juan River, and it is evident from their character that nearly all the prominent topographical features of that region are of volcanic origin. As far as is definitely known, basaltic lavas predominate along both the Panama and Nicaraguan Canals. Besides these, along the Nicaragua Canal, and perhaps also the other, there are metamorphic rocks which constitute the real backbone of the continental connection.

Yours, with respect,

J. W. POWELL,
Director.
